By CAROLYN COKER

We had an assembly last Thursday afternoon. The University of Florida choir presented us with an enjoyable program. The choir is on its way to New York making tours and stops along the way.

Have you been noticing how many of the girls have been wearing knee socks and tights? They are back in style once again.

Navy blue has become the latest rage. Everyone is wearing and a few are even driving navy? Skirts, sweaters, blouses, coats, and socks have all become navy blue. A few of the students around the campus suffer from an obsession known as speed-o-mania. It is an irresistible tendency to speed. It is characterized by a lead foot. Symptoms of this illness are slow clocks, worn tires and bare gas pedals. Tickets are possible cures, but death is the only permanent cure.

Saturday our choir went to Greenville for a music contest of this section of the state. They rated superior plus, which was far above any of the other contestants. This has been a very busy week. Tuesday night there was a basketball game here. Thursday night there was a wrestling match here. Basketball will be home again Friday night. In addition to these, a bus drivers school is being held every day.

Dysentery in Swine Herds Showing Rise

Farmers who bring newly-purchased pigs into their herds this winter without taking health precautions are running the chance of suffering some heavy losses.

A major threat right now is swine dysentery, says the American Foundation for Animal Health. This disease is becoming more and more of a problem. It can affect up to 100 percent of the herd, and can cause 25 to 50 percent death losses if it goes untreated.

What warning signs of dysentery should a farmer watch for? Scouring is one of the major symptoms. But other diseases cause scouring, too, so a first step in controlling an outbreak is to have a veterinarian diagnose the exact cause, and then take proper treatment measures.

Farmers are advised to make sure that pigs are bought from a healthy herd. Newly-purchased pigs should be kept apart from the home herd for a period of weeks, because infected hogs can be spreaders of this disease even before they show symptoms.

MIRROR MORSELS

Life is not so complex if we do not persist in making it so. We need faith; we need to be brave; we need chronically to keep the corners of the mouth turned up and not down. And after all, it is only a step at a time.—Ralph Waldo Trine

Man, being essentially active, must find in activity his joy, as well as his beauty and glory; and labor, like everything else that is good, is its own reward.—Whipple

When thou hast done a good act and another has received it, why dost thou still look for a third thing besides these, as fools do, either to have the reputation of having done a good act or to obtain a return?—Marcus Aurelius
