

MIRROR MEDITATION

By EMMITT L. BRINSON

Recently I read an article by a noted college professor that a "disturbing sign" of our modern era is the negative attitude of our college students toward religion.

He pointed to the danger that lies within their inability to reconcile the modern knowledge of astrophysics with Genesis. The advance of the sciences and astronomy to the location of heaven, the ascension, and many other modern teachings contradictory to those as told in the Bible.

It is true that some young people, having reached certain levels of knowledge, become infatuated with false dignity--protocol and sophistication. They sometimes resort to iconoclasm and even atheism becomes fashionable.

Failing to pursue whole truths, they slumber in ignorance cloaked in self esteem. Only the mature intellectual can see the difference between the philosophy of emotional religion and the soul of man, the entity that is God's, as taught by Jesus of Nazareth.

The mature intellectual is able to orientate himself by finding in the revelations of modern science proofs of the Divine laws of Almighty God--all emanating from another dimension, or spirit world. It is here that heaven exists.

Einstein's theory for example states that any physical object can be described in terms of its continuous functions in space; and further that the mass of an object is synonymous with its energy.

In the light of the space time continuum, therefore, the passage of Jesus can be considered through the scientific analysis as well as the doctrinaire. Each equally venerable and spiritual.

Youth can find within the depths of mind and soul--a whole new light--new challenge--new life--for here he taps the knowledge and power of God. He finds that within the mind there is an inner self that is ruled by conscience, intuition and virtue. He learns that his being is without bounds. It is beautiful and perfect and good.

When youth opens the mind to this truth it will reveal even more truths which immediately reduces to insignificance the petty differences as laid down by mere man.

He discovers that what he has learned from infancy--about life--its realities--his education, various concepts, modern advance--is but a foundation that has led him to this seed of doubt, placed by the hand of God. His at his choosing, and with cultivation will flower into further advance of truth.

What a glorious opportunity for modern youth to be presented with such challenge. To find beauty and reverence and delight as he discovers his very existence a part of the whole-- seeking harmony. Rendering good for good--and bad for bad.

Ah, yes, this world is not a product of manifold power--but of One Will, One Mind, in everything--the sun, the stars, the heavens, in all its infinity. The earth and everything therein--seen or unseen. That One Mind is everywhere present, everywhere active.

Youth will learn by honest pursuit now--or by frustrated anxiety later--that whatever or whoever opposes this Almighty Will of God, is everywhere balked and baffled. To enter into this relationship with God--one easily detects the error in certain religions--concept or dogma.
