ROCKHOUNDS—on Grandfather Mountain. A family of rockhounds prospecting on Grandfather Mountain, where rock formations are among the oldest in the world and mineral deposits in four places include gold.

Easier to Keep Freezer Odors Out Than to Eliminate Them, Orr Says

Have you been having trouble with odors in your home freezer? If so, you have probably found out that they are hard to get rid of.

Miss Nita Orr, frozen food specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says you can keep odors out far easier than you can get them out. "Freezers should have no odor," says Miss Orr. "But I still receive many calls from homemakers wanting to know what to do when they do have undesirable odors in the freezer."

Miss Orr says the freezer should smell clean and cold. Follow these suggestions for avoiding freezer odors.

"Put your food in containers and packages that let no moisture out of the food and no air into it. Be sure the packaging material is put on the food right before it is frozen.

"Keep the temperature at least as cold as zero degrees to store the food. Freeze food at a lower temperature if possible. Do not overload your freezer with unfrozen food.

"If you smoke, do so away from the freezer when it is open. If you visit a freezer locker plant, don't smoke in the processing, chilling, freezing or storage rooms, either.

"Keep the plug securely fastened in the socket. Check often to see if the freezer is operating properly. Never pull the master switch when you leave home."

If food spoils in your freezer, you are in for a lot of trouble. You will need patience while working on the freezer.

Remove the food, disconnect the freezer and defrost it. Wash the freezer inside with a cloth or sponge wrung out of water that has baking soda in it. However, if the odor is bad, you may need to go a step further.

Use a cupful of household ammonia to a gallon of water. Keep an open container of this in the closed freezer overnight. Remove the ammonia and wash the freezer with strong soda water. Rinse and be sure all trace of ammonia is gone.

"If your freezer does not have a belt and if there is no plastic inside, you can use the dry heat method to remove odor," cautions Miss Orr. "You can put an old-fashioned toaster (not the pop-up kind) or a hair dryer inside the freezer. Let it stay until the inside freezer walls feel warm to your hand.
