Naturally, Bill Bunting (6-7) will be the big gun for New Bern High school's hustling basketball team this season, but it's no one-man outfit.

With Cecil Harrison and Jerry Verrone at the guard positions, the Bears have a pair of sentinels who can hold their own against any other defensive combo in the Northeastern Conference.

Opponents of the Bruins have no illusions when it comes to Bunting. The general strategy employed by most coaches will be to anticipate a minimum of 25 points from the lanky goal tosser, while restricting his teammates to as few baskets as possible.

Kinston's Red Devils, the defending loop champions, have great respect for Bunting. He scored 86 points against them in three games last year, but their own offensive success enabled them to squeak through. The Devils have another strong club this season, and undoubtedly will elect to run with the Bears. However, a few Northeastern quints may resort to slow-down tactics against the local youngsters.

If the Bruins are able to come up with a good defense, to go along with what should be an adequate offense, they should be a real contender for the loop crown. There are few soft spots along the way, however.

Aaron Bryant, a product of New Bern's J. T. Barber High school, is having a fine season as a defensive and for the Los Angeles Rams. And Walt Belamy (also from J. T. Barber) is continuing his pro basketballing at Baltimore.

Walt made All-America at Indiana, starred for the U. S. Olympic champions, and was rookie of the year in his first pro season a few years back. Last season wasn't his best, but he bids fair to draw plenty of sports headlines again this year.
