By JENNIE KENNEL

Hi again.
I spent last weekend in Kinston and ate crow the whole time. If you haven't heard by now, New Bern lost to Kinston last Friday. There was only a one touchdown difference, but it might have well been a hundred.

Even if we did lose, I was still proud of our boys. One Kinstonian told me that he felt New Bern had played the better game, but Kinston just had the better luck. I agreed, not admitting that I was a little prejudiced.

Oh, I heard someone else say that our band was extra good. I didn't get to see the whole performance, but the other cheerleaders said they were great.

Ginger Armstrong did a solo twirl that was executed perfectly. Have you ever noticed the medals on her uniform? I think she's won the State Baton championship three or four times. That's pretty good for a girl who is only a junior.

Gosh, I'm always talking about football. Don't worry though. There are no more games until next year. Now I'll hound you with basketball. Kinston kept telling me to be prepared for another defeat. Being the optimistic type, I just laughed in their faces. Let's go, boys, and get them on the court.

Tomorrow marks the end of a full year since President Kennedy was assassinated. It seems like a short time in some respects, yet dreadfully long in others. I really miss him. After talking with some of the high school students, I've found that they feel the same way.

Most often, they express their sadness for little John-John and Caroline. Growing up without a Father will be the roughest part for the two small children.

and obviously poor as far as material things go, hesitated a moment. Then he said softly, "I guess what I remember is that none of the people that I saved ever got around to thanking me."

Even as in Biblical days, when Jesus healed the lepers, man's ingratitude had been demonstrated many centuries later on the shores of Chicago.
