

TOT TALK

New Bernians planning to visit New York with their small fry this summer may want to treat themselves and junior to a helicopter ride.

Operating from a heliport at 12th Avenue and West 30th Street, Hughes Helicopter will give two passengers a 20 minute flight over the Big Town's skyscrapers, statues and parks for the price of $12.50 per person.

If your youngster is under nine years, he will get to go for half price. In the event you're not quite up to forking out this much from your vacation money, there's a 15 minutes flight to the Statue of Liberty that sells for $7.50 per person and the half price for tots also applies as in the above flight.

Cheapest flight of all is a 10 minute over the West Side for $5. Reservations are not necessary, but for further information when you reach New York you can get the full story by dialing 695-0520.

In contemplating such a flight, bear in mind that the helicopter has room for only two passengers in addition to the pilot. It flies at a low level, affording the best possible view of the city.

Just as popular with youngsters as the Statue of Liberty are the Empire State Building, China Town, Coney Island and the Bronx Zoo. And, if you have the time, take your moppet to Rockefeller Center, the United Nations and the Museum of the American Indian.

At 34th Street and 6th Avenue, you and your family can visit the biggest department store in the world, R. H. Macy and Co. and leaving the Herald Square exit of this huge establishment go south two blocks to Gimbel's.

By all means head for the Pet Shop on the eighth floor. But let us warn you, Junior or Betsy may insist that you purchase one of the many adorable puppies on display there.

If your child already has a dog or a cat, he can buy his pet a gift, ranging from cat cologne to dog pretzels.

Most American heroes of the Revolutionary period are by now two men, the actual man and the romantic image. Some are even three men--the actual man, the image, and the debunked remains.--Esther Forbes.

There are two times when you can never tell what is going to happen. One is when a man takes his first drink; and the other is when a woman takes her latest.--O. Henry.
