

Buds AND Blossoms

By MAMIE MILLER

"Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein."--Mark 10:15.

Daylilies have been beautiful this year. They come in glamorous varieties. You can purchase them cheaper by waiting until after blooming season. Shades of deep gold and shades of pink have been exceedingly good this season.

Sometimes cannas are infested with worms. You may kill this leaf roller by spraying every two weeks with Malathion.

Fertilize all camellias and azaleas. Don't do this after the middle of July because they may get cold hurt. As soon as running roses finish blooming, prune them. Use spray for mildews or black spot on them.

Put out cuttings of box wood and chrysanthemums. They make better plants. Put out second planting of asters, celosia, petunia, snaps, zinnia and marigold.

This week's Buds and Blossoms poem, from the pen of John Bennett, is titled "In A Rose Garden."

A hundred years from now,
dear heart,
The grief will all be o'er;
The sea of care will surge in
vain
Upon a careless shore.
These glasses we turn down
today
Here at the parting of the way,
We shall be wineless then as
they,
And shall not mind it more.

A hundred years from now,
dear heart,
We'll neither know nor care
What came of all life's bitter-
ness,
Or followed love's despair.
Then fill the glasses up again,
And kiss me through the rose-
leaf rain;
We'll build one castle more in
Spain,
And dream one more dream
there.

One taper lights a thousand, yet shines as it has shone; and the humblest light may kindle a brighter than its own. -- Hezekiah Butterworth.

All who joy would win must share it. Happiness was born a twin.--Byron.

He that riseth late must trod all day, and shall scarce overtake his business at night.--Benjamin Franklin.

To secure a contented spirit, measure your desires by your fortune, and not your fortune by your desires.--Jeremy Taylor.

The throbbing crimson tide of life

Will not have left a stain. The song we sing together, dear,

The dream we dream together here,

Will mean no more than means a tear
Amid a summer rain.

A hundred years from now,
dear heart,

The grief will all be o'er;
The sea of care will surge in
vain

Upon a careless shore.
These glasses we turn down
today

Here at the parting of the way,
We shall be wineless then as
they,

And shall not mind it more.

A hundred years from now,
dear heart;

We'll neither know nor care
What came of all life's bitter-
ness,

Or followed love's despair.
Then fill the glasses up again,
And kiss me through the rose-
leaf rain;

We'll build one castle more in
Spain,
And dream one more dream
there.

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward to what they were before.-- Shakespeare.

No heart is empty of the humor of curiosity, the beggar being as attentive in his station to an improvement of knowledge as the prince.-- Osborn.

The chief pleasure of eating does not consist in costly seasoning or exquisite flavor, but in yourself. Seek you for sauce in sweating.--Horace.

The most original modern authors are not so because they advance what is new, but simply because they know how to put what they have to say as if it had never been said before.--Goethe.

Circumstances form the character; but, like petrifying matters, they harden while they form.--Landor.

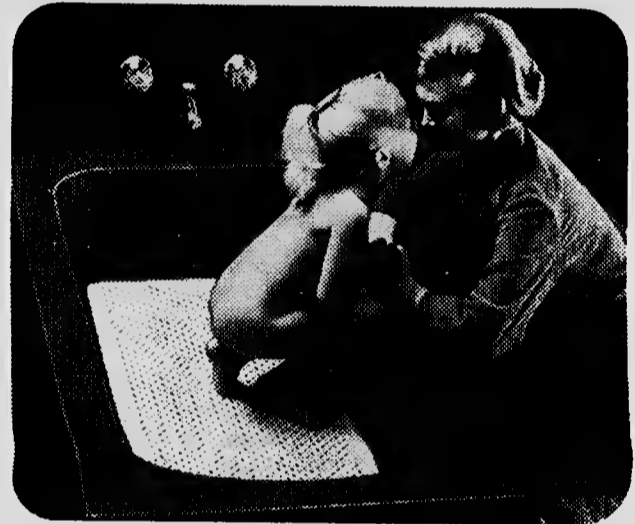

Next in importance to freedom and justice is popular education, without which neither justice nor freedom can be permanently maintained.-- Garfield.

If we take the good we find, asking no questions, we shall have heaping measures. The great gifts are not got by analysis. Everything good is on the highway.--Emerson.

As fate is inexorable, and not to be moved either with tears or reproaches, an excess of sorrow is as foolish as profuse laughter; while, on the other hand, not to mourn at all is insensibility.--Seneca.
