SPORTS REFLECTIONS

of Athletes and Events

Newspaper accounts last Monday morning describing a fight that occurred during the South Carolina-Marquette basketball game read like something lifted out of Grimm's Fairy Tales.

Millions watching on television, including thousands of fans in the New Bern area, saw what happened, and it wasn't as some sports writers in Columbia reported the hectic fracas.

Published stories said the battle "finally was broken up by the officials and coaches" and "The South Carolina band played the Star Spangled Banner to give police an edge if any of the crowd started surging on the court."

Actually it wasn't the coaches and officials, as reported, who stopped the melee, but the police. And there wasn't any IF about the crowd. Many of the more stupid did surge onto the court.

As for the Gamecock band playing the National Anthem. This wasn't done until the fight was over. Like one of the commentators doing the television show said at the time, "They played it four minutes

Towering crane arm lifts roof slowly into position over second floor as construction crews guide modular unit toward its place. The project was undertaken to show that cost reductions are possible without loss of quality through use of material technologies, volume procurement and factory assembly methods. The complete community included 180 townhouses, 16 apartments and four ranch style houses.

Not to return one good office for another is inhuman; but to return evil for good is diabolical. There are too many even of this sort, who the more they owe, the more they hate.—Seneca.

All who have meditated on the art of governing mankind have been convinced that the fate of empires depends on the education of youth.—Aristotle.

Duty is the grandest of ideas, because it implies the idea of God, of the soul, of liberty, of responsibility, of immortality.—Lacordaire.

If you cannot inspire a woman with love of yourself, fill her above the brim with love of herself; all that runs over will be yours.—Colton.

Genuine good taste consists in saying much in few words, in choosing among our thoughts, in having order and arrangement in what we say, and in speaking with composure.—Fenelon.

Life is hardly respectable if it has no generous task, no duties or afflictions that constitute a necessity of existence. Every man's task is his life preserver.—Emerson.

Our present knowledge of the universe is such as to leave us with a very inadequate conception of the majesty of existence.—Oliver J. Lodge.

Judges ought to be more learned than witty, more reverent than plausible, and more advised than confident. Above all things, integrity is their portion and proper virtue.—Bacon.

Though reason is progressive, instinct is stationary. Five thousand years have added no improvement to the hive of the bee, or the house of the beaver.—Colton.

too late."

Considering the disadvantage any visiting team is under at the Carolina Coliseum in Columbia, it's a wonder the Gamecocks ever lose a home game. If Marquette can win there, they can win anywhere.

The one bright spot was the officiating. Under exceedingly trying circumstances, the whistle blowers called a good game. No one can truthfully say that the fight resulted from the contest getting out of hand.

South Carolina has, without question, one of the top teams in the country, and deserves its high ranking in the polls. However, it is doubtful that Coach Frank McGuire and his outfit will ever win any sportsmanship awards.

Admittedly, college basketball isn't for sissies. It's rough and it's tough, but a lot of athletes manage to succeed at it without carrying a chip on their shoulder and swinging haymakers from a player's blind side.

After what happened last Sunday afternoon, there's more reason than ever to be glad that South Carolina is no longer in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

There is, I know not how, in the minds of men, a certain presage, as it were, of a future existence, and this takes the deepest root, and is most discoverable, in the greatest geniuses and most exalted souls.—Cicero.
