Energy Crisis. What You Can Do Your Own Home.

Naturally, you'll be a lot more comfortable. And you'll be cutting down on one of the biggest single drains on America's energy resources.

Buy An Air Conditioner, Before You Buy The Right One.

During hot weather, air conditioning accounts for about 40 percent of the electricity used in the home. So it's important to use it wisely.

If you're planning to buy a new air conditioner, look for the most efficient model for your particular situation. A unit that is too large or too small for the area you want to cool can waste electricity.

So figure out the amount of space your air conditioner will have to keep cool, and give these figures to your appliance dealer. Call CP&L and ask one of the technical representatives to help determine just how large or small is right for the job.

Whether or not you have air conditioning, a lot of heat can build up in your attic if it's not properly ventilated. This heat radiates down from the ceiling and virtually smothers the cooler air in your home's living area. An attic ventilator fan, thermostatically controlled, is the answer.

This fan will draw the hot air out of your attic, making you a lot more comfortable, and relieving some of the strain off your air conditioning. (The attic ventilator should not be confused with a one match represents one BTU. Now imagine the heat from 60,000 matches.

That's how much heat your range, dishwasher, clothes dryer and other appliances can give off in a day's time. 60,000 matches worth! That's a lot of heat. And it puts a tremendous strain on your air conditioner. So if you'll use these appliances during the early morning or late evening when it's cooler, your air conditioner won't have to work so hard, you'll save money on your electric bill, and you'll be a lot more comfortable.

And remember, the harder you work your air conditioner, the higher the risk of costly repair bills. So keep your filters clean and avoid using the coldest thermostat settings.

For every degree below 75 that you set your thermostat, you add about seven percent to your cooling costs.

You may find that 75 degrees, or higher, is a comfortable, money-saving compromise.

CP&L Must Build New Generating Plants To Meet Growing Demand.

Here in the Carolinas, CP&L customers use about a third more electricity than the average family nationally. And the overall demand is doubling every seven years.

Also, in the years ahead, massive quantities of electricity will be needed to help clean up the environment.

Sewage treatment plants, recycling machinery, air scrubbers for industrial smoke stacks—all of these run on electric power.

So you can see, CP&L will have to continue building new generating plants to meet this area's future demands.

But if everybody makes an effort to cut down, it will help ease the drain on our natural resources and save you money at the same time.

INVENTORY

Count your blessings, count them one by one,
From the first faint rays of dawn to setting sun;
In the quiet of your room, the world wrapped in night,
Every care that cursed the day can fade from sight.
Take stock of the glorious things God has given you,
Not a debt your Maker owed, that's long overdue,
But a generous outpouring of love within His heart,
A bountiful expression He is anxious to impart.
You can best repay Him by passing on to others
A portion of His kindness, all men are brothers.
Observing the golden rule is God's eternal plan,
Show him you're grateful, help your fellow man.
Don't be like the lepers, those hasty, thoughtless nine
Who forgot their healer, the Savior, Christ divine;
But emulate the one whose feet led him to return
To his benefactor, and made his whole heart yearn
To serve this Man of Galilee, to glorify His name,
Be like the one in ten, the grateful one who came.
I know it happened long ago, it may seem far away,
But alas, the same ingratitude is with us today.
