

SENATOR
SAM ERVIN SAYS

Another school year has begun with intense concern over the busing of students to achieve so-called racial balance.

School officials continue to try to find answers and revenues to provide buses to transport pupils from their own neighborhoods to distant schools in the aftermath of a long series of federal court orders and HEW guidelines. To the dismay of countless Americans, the educational system is bogged down in an endless turmoil of trying to force parents and their children into situations they have never wanted.

On May 8th of this year, I introduced S. 1737, to establish a freedom of choice system for student assignment to public schools, and to effectively restrict Federal bureaucratic authority and the jurisdiction of Federal courts with respect to public school policies.

The time has come for Congress to take definitive, unequivocal action to end finally the senseless, forced busing of our schoolchildren. Unfortunately, past legislative efforts to halt this unconscionable practice have been perverted by judicial misinterpretation and studied disregard by government bureaucrats. It is indeed a great and sad irony that the Federal courts and the Federal bureaucracy have required the use of racial quotas to effectuate the Constitutional principle of equal protection under the laws which prohibits the government from treating people differently on account of their race.

S. 1737 forbids any official or department of the Federal government to withhold or threaten to withhold Federal financial assistance from a public school operating under a freedom of choice system on account of student body racial composition. Specifically, the bill would prohibit withholding financial assistance for the purpose of coercing the transportation or transfer of students or faculty from one public school to another.

This proposal similarly prohibits any United States court from ordering a change in the racial composition of any public school operating under a freedom of choice plan, or requiring the transportation of students from one school to another, or denying any student the right to attend any public school chosen by the student's parents.

I have urged by colleagues in the Senate to renew our opposition to the usurpation by the Federal government of authority and responsibility lawfully vested in local school boards around our country. Senators Allen, Eastland, Helms, Nunn, Talmadge and Tower have co-sponsored this legislation, and I trust that others will join in support of this effort to provide the American people and particularly our children with relief from this tyranny that they have awaited so long.
