Reader wants more national and international news

Dear Mr. Cannon:

Upon seriously and carefully reading three copies of The West Craven highlights, may I congratulate you as Editor and Publisher. The three copies of the West Craven highlights not only gave me the privilege of reading about local and city news but state news as well. With all respect to you, the editor and publisher of The West Craven highlights, it is my opinion that for a paper to be truly successful it must contain national and international news. I wish to enclose an article of the subject of inflation, depression, rebellion and Communism. An article which is lengthy, debatable and perhaps critical may be edited in your paper if you desire to edit. May you have great success with The West Craven Highlights.

Sincerely yours,

Eugene R. Barrow, Jr.

One of the greatest of our history's trend-setters, this woman was as innovative in her personal style as she was clever in her business affairs. After earning a spectacular reputation as a dancer and woman of fashion in Paris in the early 1900s, she and her husband returned to the United States in 1912 to an even more enthusiastic reception. She influenced women everywhere to don silky Turkish trousers, feathery hats and large bright-colored flower corsages. She also introduced the Hesitation Waltz and the tango to this country. Who was that lady? Irene Castle.
