Cleaning Hints For Fireplace Soot

If your fireplace has become stained with smoke and soot over the winter, you can remove these stains with simple cleaning methods.

First, says Dr. Glenda Herman, extension housing specialist at North Carolina State University, scrub the facing with strong soap and water.

For brick or rough-textured areas, you may need to use a stiff brush. Then rinse thoroughly with clear water.

"You may need to use a mild acid bleach, such as vinegar or acetic acid," the specialist says. "Again, apply with a brush and rinse with water."

For stubborn stains, scrub with a hydrochloric acid and water solution. To prepare it, mix one part acid to ten parts water. Rinse off with water immediately will also remove construction stains from mortar, the specialist says.

Place Rose In Sunny, Loamy Site

While making your gardening and landscaping plans this winter, consider the rose. This is the most popular of all flowers and usually has a place around any home.

If you're starting from scratch with roses, here are a few suggestions from North Carolina State University extension horticulturists regarding basic requirements:

Plant roses in deep, rich loamy soil for best results.

The soil should be well drained and located in a sunny spot.

Provide plenty of water during the growing season and be sure there is adequate plant food available at all times.

It's best to be highly selective in picking the initial planting site, and choose one that meets each of the requirements listed.

The sunny exposure is important, the NCSU specialists point out, but roses will do fairly well with partial shade. They should be in the sun at least half the day and preferably three-fourths of the day.
