believing that the ability to drive has been impaired. A refusal to take the test is considered to be an admission of guilt.

The price for being arrested and convicted of DUI is high, indeed, and not just financially. Many hometown newspapers publish the names of persons arrested for DUI, and almost all will publish the names of those convicted for this offense.

This is only the beginning of the real cost that must be paid. The first soulshaking jolt comes when the judge announces his determination. First offense could net a driver a fine of not less than $100, and not more than $500, imprisonment of not more than six months, or both. Additionally, the N. C. Department of Motor Vehicles will revoke the driver's license.

A person convicted of DUI a second time within a 10-year period faces an automatic jail term of not less than three days, nor more than one year. In addition, he or she faces a possible fine of not less than $200 nor more than $500, and a loss of driving privileges for four years.

"It's easy to avoid all these problems," says Col. Guy, of the Governor's Highway Safety Program. "Just don't get behind the wheel of a vehicle after you have started drinking, no matter how much you've had, and don't get into a car with anyone who has been drinking."
