Strawberry Festival

Spring is in the air and strawberries are beginning to ripen on the vine. Vanceboro is planning to celebrate this time of the year with its first annual Strawberry Festival this weekend on Saturday and Sunday, May 14 and 15. Activities will be happening all along Main Street, so keep your eyes open for the big red strawberry signs along the way.

The Festival will open at 10 a.m. Saturday morning with craft displays and tables with baked goods located on the sidewalk between Powell Brothers Hardware and the U.S. Post Office. Local craftsmen and churches are participating and should have a variety of items through which to browse. The winners of the annual Yard Beautification Contest, sponsored by the Vanceboro Junior Woman's Club and held May 11, will be posted at this location. Be sure to go view these prize-winning yards. Pamphlets and information on child abuse will also be available to increase the public's awareness of this growing problem. In case of rain, booths will be set up in the Farm Life Gymnasium.

Follow your tastebuds to find fresh strawberries, cookbooks and recipes, and strawberry ice cream on the yard in front of the Carolina Telephone building. You won't have to pick your own berries to make that delicious dessert for the weekend-or that jam that could last all year. Or you could find a new recipe to try in the cookbook and pamphlet of recipes. And we're sure that our strawberry ice cream will hit the spot!

A variety of antique cars will be shown at the Wachovia Bank

Senator Jessie Helms Addresses Campbell University Graduates

Senator Helms

people around the world are liberated — liberated from their loved ones, from their traditions and from their society and from their way of life. These people are living proof of the theorem—where there is no law, there is no bread and there is no bread where there is no freedom to plant.

Senator Helms referred the graduates to the Scriptures which has timely counsel for us. "Let him who thinketh himself to stand, we are cautioned, take heed, lest he fall."

He pointed out that epidemics are never deterred by national boundary lines and many people and groups seem to think of no higher

Farm Life School Alumni Honor Class of 1933

This class remembers when the boy's dormitory burned, and they remember the insurance on the building amounted to $6,800.00. The number of students had declined so no new dormitory was built. Instead of a new dorm, an extension was added to the administration building for a gym-auditorium. This class did not have a chance to use the new gym-auditorium, because it was finished the year after they graduated, 1934.

You might be interested in dropping by the Art Classroom to hear some of the happenings of 1933 from the reunion class Friday night after the banquet.

The members of the 1933 class were:
Armetta Bland Godfrey, Pensacola, Fla.
Doris Buck Bryan, Vanceboro
Ruby Cannon Wiggins, Chesapeake, Va.
Mary Causey Koonce, Trenton, NC
Estelle Godley Elks, Greenville, NC
Mildred Hellen Blackwelder, Harrisburg, NC
Eslie Mae Huff Butler, Marion, SC
Vivian Hughes Sanchez, Washington, D.C.

In a picture book setting of hundreds of guests and graduating students from Campbell University in Buies Creek, N.C., U.S. Senator Jessie Helms gave an inspiring and informative address to the graduates.

Senator Helms opened his address by speaking highly of Campbell University as an institution that is headed by a splendid American who would be a credit to any university in the land. He was referring to President Norman Wiggins.

Senator Helms stated to the graduates, "that we live in a time when there are so many questions and so few answers. Many answers don't make sense because the questions are so often foolish." He stressed that students of today enjoy a full measure of freedom and opportunity to make choices. He was quick to note that so often freedom is not always easy to bear. Many
