Deadline For Crop Insurance

According to Jim Taylor, District Director, Federal Crop Insurance Corporation the deadline for insuring new crops for 1984 is March 31, 1984. Farmers today are required to use sound management more than ever before, capital investments are mounting-production costs have been increasing for a number of years. Yet the best planning can be disrupted by good old Mother Nature - hazards a farmer can not control. Each year many acres are totally destroyed or badly damaged because of drought, excessive moisture, disease, insects or some other unavoidable reason. The loss of a crop or a series of crops could place the farmer in such financial difficulty that he would be forced to stop farming and seek off-farm employment. Through the crop insurance program farmers may eliminate some of the worry by spreading their risk over a period of years; therefore, keeping themselves in business.
