

Gaskins to Attend the 4-H Congress

Some 38 delegates from 20 North Carolina counties will attend the 63rd National 4-H Congress Nov. 25-29 in Chicago, Ill.

Among them is Beverly Gaskins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Gaskins, Jr. of 660 Antioch Road, New Bern, NC.

The Tar Heel delegates won the expense-paid trips as state winners in a 4-H program or activity.

While in Chicago, they will compete for more than $280,000 in educational scholarships, valued at $750 to $1,500 each and made available by private sector donors.

Planned and conducted by the National 4-H Council and the Agricultural Extension Services of the state land-grant universities, the congress will attract more than 1,600 4-H members from across the country.

The congress theme is "4-H: Building on Experience" and it challenges young people to develop their full potential for the betterment of self, community, nation and world. The congress program focuses on the continued development and growth of 4-H members.

The congress officially opens on Sunday, Nov. 25, with a general assembly. Judith K. Hofer, president and chief executive officer, May Company, California, and a 4-H alumna, will be the keynote speaker. The week's program will provide opportunities for delegates to talk with leaders in education, government, industry and agriculture. The 4-H'ers will be honored at recognition events hosted by donors and will pursue current issues and interests at workshops.

Educational and cultural tours to key points in the Chicago area are special program features.

The annual national 4-H fashion revue will be held Wednesday morning and the eight national 4-H alumni winners, including Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., will be honored at the Thursday morning assembly.

The Thursday afternoon assembly will feature presentations of Presidential awards—the highest honors accorded 4-H members — to
