

Outer Banks

October-wildfoods, waterfowl
The first two weekends in October along the Banks will feature wildfoods and waterfowl.

The October Marsh and Sea Fest, dubbed "wildfoods weekend," will be held October 3 to 5 at the North Carolina Marine Resources Center on Roanoke Island. Participants will engage in full menu of activities, including a foraging expedition for unusual foods, before preparing the "wildfoods" banquet, a variety of culinary concoctions not found on the typical seafood platter.

From October 10 to 12, the 18th Annual N.C. Waterfowl Weekend will attract exhibitors from near and far who will display decoys, paintings of wildlife, cross stitch and a variety of handmade articles. For further information on September 25, 1986 either of these events, contact the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce at 919-261-3801 or P.O. Box 90, Kitty Hawk, N.C.27949.

Fishing on the Outer Banks
Fishing from surf and pier intensifies with the approach of fall. "After Labor Day," as the locals might put it, "the fishing gets serious." Cooling water temperatures in September bring the bigger fish closer to shore to hang around until Thanksgiving, the traditional peak of the autumn fishing season, or even thru December if the weather cooperates. In any case, the angler can cast with high expectations for a variety of species during fall months.

New Exhibit! Dinosaurs & Fossils

Sept.-Dec. 1986
This exhibit combines the work of students in our summer program on dinosaurs with artifacts and factual materials on the prehistory of the region. Students' works in the exhibit include three large model dinosaurs--average height, 7 feet,--a back-drop for each dinosaur, and numerous drawings and paintings illustrating the children's views of the world during the Mesozoic Era 60 million years ago. In addition, the Museum staff has gathered information and fossilized remains pertinent to and representative of this area. A lecture series will accompany the exhibit, and topics will focus on regional archeology, fossil-hunting and identification, the age of the dinosaurs, and the history of coastal formation. Lectures will be offered Sundays at 2 p.m. and admission is free. For further information, please contact the Museum.
