Barry Lynn Will Give Concert at St. Mary's

Lynn Talented Combination Soldier-Dancer

We are having a guest at Saint Mary's Saturday evening, January 22. He is quite a combination—a soldier-dancer, the latter by profession, the former by invitation of our President.

A Pfc. stationed at Pueblo, Colorado, Barry Lynn is making an Eastern concert tour on his furlough, stopping here en route to Chapel Hill from Richmond.

Though in the Army, Pfc. Lynn has continued his concert performances under unusual conditions. He has had many strange sets, cement platforms and the linoleum of a hospital ward floor (in the latter, he made his leaps over the ends of the beds). He often had in his audiences soldiers who had never before seen a male dancer or Modern Dance. His dramatic, fluid, and colorful movements won their approval.

The Modern Dance Barry Lynn does is not bound by form, but is a style free to express emotions and ideas. It shows the reality of life rather than a studied movement of it. Barry Lynn emphasizes rhythm, which he believes to be the foundation of all dance. His performances run from the lyric to the tragic, expressing all emotions. His lithe, well-controlled body responds to the various moods of the music.

His program at Saint Mary's is to include the works of many masters of music. He will interpret Villa-Lobos' "Curtain Raiser," Ravel's "Hail and Farewell" and "Nocturne," Shostakovitch's "Suite," and Satie-Moffat's "The Seeking Hands."

EXPRESSION RECITAL

A poetry reading contest among the first-year expression students took place in the auditorium Monday afternoon, January 10. The study of poetry is included in the course of oral interpretation of literature taught by Miss Florence Davis and required by all expression students.

The first award went to Marion Gaither who recited "Young Fellow, My Lad," by R. Service; second place tied between Lucy Woodruff with "The Fool," by R. Service, and Mana Burnett, reading "The Spring Hat," by Alfred Noyes. Honorable mention went to Betty Lokey, a town student, who gave, "We Are Seven," by William Wordsworth.

The second-year students held their annual poetry recital in the auditorium Monday afternoon, January 17. Annette Fulton, reading a series of poems by Sara Teasdale, won first place, and Caroline Taliaferro second place with the reading of several poems by Carl Sandburg.

The winning students of both the first and second year classes recited

Fourth War Loan Drive Opened

Goal Means $75 Bond From Every One in United States

The Fourth War Loan Drive opened on Tuesday, January 18, and will last until Tuesday, February 15. The goal this time is $14,000,000,000! During this drive we not only hope, but expect, to buy more stamps than we have been accustomed to buying heretofore.

It is not necessary to state the many reasons why we should support the Fourth War Loan Drive, for we have heard them time and time again, but it is necessary to be reminded that we cannot cease buying stamps and bonds until the war is won. This is our way of helping to win the war—our way of being good soldiers.

The slogan this time is "Let's ALL Back the Attack." On our campus, that means every Saint Mary's student and every faculty member. Count the number of stamps you have bought this year. You may have enough to buy an $18.75 bond now. If you do not, surely you can buy enough stamps between now and February 15, to fill out that stamp book. When you have enough stamps to buy a bond, see Miss Peggy Hopkins, who is chairman of the drive at Saint Mary's.

Let's see Saint Mary's contribute 100% toward the Fourth War Loan Drive; let's help reach our $14,000,000,000 goal; "Let's ALL Back the Attack."

Mrs. R. G. S. Davis Gives School $1000

Mrs. Ernest Cruikshank announces a gift of $1,000.00 made to Saint Mary's in December.

The gift was from the Shuford Mills in Hickory, and was made through Mrs. R. G. S. Davis (Mary Shuford, '10), of Henderson, an officer of the company, a devoted alumna of Saint Mary's, and a member of the Council of the Saint Mary's Alumnae Association.

This gift is to be used for the benefit of the school, wherever it is most needed.

Mrs. Phelps Succeeds Mrs. Hollis In Saint Mary's Business Dept.

Mrs. Leon H. Phelps, of Raleigh, has succeeded Mrs. Jack Hollis as teacher of business correspondence, business law, advanced stenography, and typing in the Saint Mary's business department. She resigned her position as secretary to Mr. W. L. Mayer, Director of Registration at State College, in order to assume her new duties on January 5.

Although she has lived in Raleigh for the past nine years, Mrs. Phelps is originally from Swanquarter. She specialized in high school teaching, majoring in English and French, at the Eastern Carolina Teachers' College in Greenville, where she received her A.B. degree. Later she did postgraduate work at the University of North Carolina. After finishing school, Mrs. Phelps taught high school English and French at Fairfield for a while. Soon after coming to Raleigh, she took the complete business and secretarial course at Miss Hardbarger's School, and the following year she taught there. Then she began her work as secretary to the State College Director of Registration.

LIKES WORK AT S. M. S.

Mrs. Phelps says she is happy to teach at Saint Mary's, as she has always been connected with schools. She believes that in her work here her experience in studying and teaching in a business college, combined with her experience in a business office, will help her to "anticipate many problems" that will confront the girls when they begin their office careers. She says, "I think my time is well spent in trying to help the girls become well-trained secretaries."

Mrs. Phelps is looking forward to her contacts with the girls. When she remarked that Mrs. Hollis' enthusiasm encouraged her to accept her Saint Mary's position, she added, "And I have not been disappointed!"

Time Current Event Contest To Be Held

Saint Mary's, as in previous years, will take part in a current events contest sponsored by Time, The Weekly News-magazine, with prizes to be presented by the publishers.

Over 250 private schools and junior colleges in 35 states and the District of Columbia will share this year in the competition, with competitors coming directly from the schools. These contests have developed from successful experiments eight years ago in a dozen recognized schools, including Deerfield, Ethel Walker, Exeter, Lawrenceville, and Laft.

In each school a prize book or a 12-inch world globe will be awarded to the student who makes the highest Calla lilies and palms were used in the chancel. Mr. Russell Broughton was in charge of the music.
