

Beckoning Belles

Among recent Hallowe'en celebrants were Pat Coulter and Sylvia Colmore. Arrayed in sheets and other Hallowe'en trimmings, the girls livened up the atmosphere of the parlors—big-little, lounge, green room, or what have you. Although she wasn't hostessing, Pat managed to meet two boys at the front door; she was, at the time, prostrate on the floor having tripped — hoots, sheets, and all. Pat tells us the gentlemen callers didn't stay very long.

Incidentally, watch the forthcoming Bulletin for more "hoot-spook" stories.

A young gentleman diner at the Toddle House informed two of our Belles, Nancy Adams and Mary Parke Jones, that he would be glad to come tidy up their rooms for a nominal sum. It seems he overheard the girls complaining about all the house-cleaning they have to do on Sunday mornings.

We didn't realize there really were Mau Mau's at St. Mary's until we saw them running over the campus the other night, shirttails flying. Was Mott Butler really seen or was she just a figment of some poor tired child's imagination? Nevertheless, be on your best behavior. You may be tapped next time the Mau Mau's run!

Our congratulations to the new grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hughes. When congratulated, Mr. Hughes replied with a remark made by a friend of his. The man, also a new grandparent, said that he certainly was happy to be a grandfather, but he just could not imagine being married to a grandmother. Couldn't that work both ways?

The Hall Council is very disturbed that Penelope didn't sign back in on the Little Store Book in Holt when she went to find Odysseus. We know she found him; Betty Ivey saw them having a milkshake. Penelope, please don't get campused! We know how much fun you and Odysseus have from five to six every day.

Quotation of the week—"Beware ye earthly mortals, for the Mighty Gods are watching you from the heights of Olympus. Make your sacrifices to Zeus immediately lest you incur the wrath of Achilles, which will descend upon you as a thunderbolt."

Dear Dorris Doar

My dear Miss Doar,

I have an affaire de coeur. It seems that a lovely young lady, whom I shall refer to as Agnes X, has captured my affection. I met her at a Duke concert not too long ago, and it was love at first sight. Call it fate, or perhaps it is her charming provincial manner; she is from the picturesque village of Cow Slip, N. C., and goes to St. Mary's Country Club; but nevertheless, I am completely and devotedly her adoring slave.

Be that as it may, after being properly introduced to her, I have several times asked her for a date, and on all these occasions she has refused. But, varium et mutabile semper femina, and indeed, she has condescended to permit me to escort her to dinner and the theater this Tuesday.

The problem is this: My father has promised me a Lincoln Continental for my birthday, but as it is sometime off yet, and all I have is a small Cadillac which I use for a campus runabout, should I gamble and use this Cadillac for the evening or should I press pater to deliver the Continental sooner? I do wish to make a lasting impression.

Sincerely yours,
Wolfgang Jason Rolfe-Smythe, III

Dear Miss Dorris Doar, Ma'in,

My name is Horace Snodgrass from Cow Slip, N. C. I go to State College, and I am in love with a girl with blue eyes and brown hair called Agnes. She is from Cow Slip too. We used to go steady, but now that she is in College she don't even so much as "Hello" me on the street. I seen her with a Duke fellow the other day and he likes her a lot, but not half as much as me. How can I win my Agnes back? I heard a car would help, and my uncle lets me use his T-Model, but she still don't want to go out with me. What am I going to do? She has my high school ring and if I can't have Agnes back I want my ring back. Oh how can I get either one of them? The ring has a red jewel in it.

Yours truly,
Horace Slocum Snodgrass

Hi Dorris,

I need some advice, quick! Couple of us boys were having a beer blast over at the frat house the other day and I met a gal there by the name of Agnes. This Agnes isn't too bad a kid but she's about the biggest hick I ever saw. She's from—get this—Cow Slip, N. C.! Ain't that a laugh! Well, anyway, I must have been pretty loaded, 'cause they tell me I asked her to the Spring Germans. Now, I don't want to hurt this pig's feelings, but I wouldn't be caught dead with her in Wake Forest, much less the Spring Germans. What'll I do? Cut me in, will you?

Ans.

I have decided to let you readers figure this one out. My only advice is: Watch out, Agnes!

Pitter Platter

Broadway and Hollywood musicals furnish lasting hits for generations of music lovers. Such standing names as Sigmund Romberg and Rogers and Hammerstein have lit the marquees of New York theaters and lifted the voices of millions.

Most of us rate Romberg as one of the Broadway department. He converged to the "flick houses" masse to see the story of his Deep in My Heart. This Italian genius with his love for Viennese waltzes has given dignity and charm to the Broadway musical. In his hands it has become classical. Best loved examples of his art are Lover, Come Back to Me, New Moon, Serenade from Student Prince, One Alone, The Desert Song, and Indian Love Call from Rose Marie. These selections are available in album form, the individual musicals or on playing records of Romberg favorites.

Recently, Hollywood has contributed many songs to the musical world. Though much of the melody and subject material for movies is taken from Broadway, the picture industry brings this material to a greater audience. Hollywood producers usually do it justice, please theater goers. Albums for Love Me or Leave Me, Pete Kelly's Blues, and Oklahoma are available for your platter collections.

The winners on our Belles parade this week are:

- One: Autumn Leaves
- Two: Moments to Remember
- Three: He
- Four: Only You

Special suggestions "for Belles Only" are La La and Feel So Good.

We predict that Sixteen Tons and Moonlight Serenade will be rated with the best in the future.
