On Wednesday night, November 14, the Beacon walked in its traditional induction ceremony. New Beacon members are sophomore Perry Grimes of Lexington, N. C., Legislative Body representative; Dianne Ricks of Jarrett, Va., un-derclassman representative to the Honor Council; Winborne Shaffer from Chapel Hill, vice-president of the sophomore class; and Susan Spaulding from Chase City, Va., president of the sophomore class. Joining the group were former Beacon members Tay Ashford, Gee Canada, Cindy Schwartz, Sally Stevens, Haynes Walker, Roses Watson, and Cydne Wright. "The Beacon is not a secret organization, since the principal purposes are to promote among the high school girls a better spirit, more co-operation, and participation in extra-curricular activities.

On November 19 and 20 the Thankgiving play, Alice in Wonderland, was presented by the Dramatics Club, Orchesis, and the Glee Club. Everyone seeing the play was taken through his second childhood as the characters danced, sang, and portrayed the little creatures that were actually a part of the imagination of a little girl named Alice. In the words of Lewis Carroll when

In response to student interest in the quitar which he has aroused with his hobby of folk singing, Mr. Shellans has announced that he intends to start a guitar class at St. Mary's. All interested students are asked to see Mr. Shellans in order to arrange a time most convenient for all. Although Monday at 9:30 A.M. has been tentatively selected, this time is subject to change.

There has been interest in a tapdancing group on campus for about a year; but Mrs. Bailey says that while the group is still "at the talking stage," it will become a reality very soon. At the beginning the "Caperettes" will meet one hour a week, probably Monday from 5:00-6:00 P.M., with an initial membership to be increased later. Cydne Wright has been elected president, with Judy Rhodes serving as secretary-treasurer. First tryouts will be held in the gym on Monday at 5:15

Dr. Stone Speaks On Common Market

As the economic unity of the world makes the proverbial "price of eggs in China" a source of concern in every country, it becomes increasingly important of ingly important for the man (and girl) on the street to know something of world economics. President Richard G. Stone spoke on the growth, success, and future of economic unity and the Common Market in assembly on Name of the control of the street to know something of world economics.

sembly on November 19. The Common Market is a union of France, Germany, Italy, Holland River land, Belgium, and Luxembourg for the purpose of eliminating destructive competition, making available labor and raw materials and increasing production. The importance of the Common Market should not be underestimated. Dr. Stone stated that the success of the Common Market could well prove to be "the most active defeat of Communism as a whole." The economic unity of free Europe is already bringing about a unity in government. This unity has been made possible by the de-Sire of each member nation to sacrifice individual privileges for the welfare of the entire group. The benefits of this unity are already

By dropping tariff restrictions on trade both inside and out, trade between Common Market nations has been increased by 30%, and trade with other nations is up 20%. Further decrease of tariff rates are expected to be put into effect in order to accelerate the growing Prosperity. Increased trade has encouraged capital investment, which is, in turn, expected to help maintain the rise.

Because of the interchange of currency among the states, the members are beginning to plan a uniform Common Market banking system. Heads of state are also considering the creation of a universal coinage system. Common eitizenship in all countries has also been been proposed to further facilitate trade. This step, if accomplished, would be a major one toward ultimate unity.

The Soviet Union is greatly alarmed at the progress of the Common Market, realizing that unity in the free world limits the progress of Communism. The United States government also sees a threat in the Common Market, but it is of a different nature. Although this country played a significant part in the formation of the Common Market, it is aware that the success of the Common Market could shake the foundations of this nation's economy.

Prosperity depends upon the ability of a nation to sell its surplus products outside its own boundaries. The competitive power of the Common Market nations is prompted by the wage differential between Common Market nations and the United States. The European workers are expected to raise their wage demands as the general standard of living rises, but a recent Act of Congress reduced tariffs 15% in order to further offset the differences in wage scales. If this country cannot compete effectively with the Common Market for the free markets of the world, the e-conomy of this nation will be adversely affected.

The economic status of a country eventually affects every aspect of life within the national boundaries. As the United States is forced to face stiff economic competition from Europe, it is the wise citizen who tries to understand the nature of a great challenge to the economic security of the nation.
