GLAMOUR SEEKING 'BEST DRESSED' MISS

Who's the Best-Dressed Girl on campus? Glamour wants to know. And St. Mary's, with The Belles spearheading the operation, is seeking her!

Six girls, Susan Crabtree, Sally Carg, Lisa Gilland, Sue Gelston, Marcia Separk and Laura Whitley, have been selected by a committee composed of Belles staff members and some other girls in school to participate in the contest on campus.

The girl who wins from these six will then be photographed in three outfits, including campus, daytime campus, and party dresses, and her entry will be sent in to the national competition.

If selected as one of the "Ten Best Dressed Girls On Campus," our St. Mary's miss will receive an all-expense paid visit to New York from May 30 to June 11 via American Airlines.

While in New York, she, with the other winners, will be a special guest at a party to be presented to 1,000 members of the fashion industry.

Prior to this activity, the girls will have been photographed in April, depending upon their individual schedules, for the August college issue of Glamour.

Other highlights of last year's festive two weeks in New York included being "Hello Dolly" and "Funny Girl" and meeting Barbara Streisand after the show. In addition, the girls giggled and jerked at Sybil Burton's scoothèque, Arthur, and at Trude Heller's, the popular Greenwich Village nightspot.

This year marks the tenth anniversary of the Glamour event and it should be one of the most thrilling for the lucky young ladies who win.

The editors of Glamour magazine believe a young woman's college years are the most formative in her life during which time she becomes an intelligent, attractive, entertaining, and charming individual.

Glamour's philosophy is that "being well-dressed and well-groomed is an integral part of an education that develops the well-rounded mind."

Therefore, the editors listed certain qualities they are looking for in these representative college girls which include: 1) A clear understanding of her fashion type; 2) A workable wardrobe plan; 3) A suitable campus look; 4) Appropriate—not rah, rah—look for off-campus occasions; 5) Individuality in her use of colors, accessories; 6) Imagination in managing a clothes budget; 7) Good grooming, not just neat, but impeccable; 8) Clean, shining, well-kept hair; 9) Deft use of make-up (enough to look pretty, but not overdone); and 10) Good figure, beautiful posture.

These six girls in the St. Mary's contest will be presented in a fashion show during the assembly program on February 3. Each girl will model her three outfits that she would wear should she be chosen.

Voting on the six contestants will be by the entire student body and will begin after the assembly program and continue through the next day.

Viewing the new dorm from the second floor of Penick, construction seems to be coming along rapidly.

NEW DORM WELL UNDERWAY

In September, St. Mary's Junior College broke ground for a new dormitory. The dormitory is now well along in its construction. It is anticipated that it will be ready for use in the beginning of the 1966-67 term.

This dormitory will house 104 students and one resident counselor. The classification of the students to occupy this building has not yet been determined, and this decision will be made by the Dean of Students, Miss Richardson.

The dormitory will be of brick construction, three stories in height, and the room arrangement will be similar to those in Penick Hall. The dormitory will have adequate reception and recreation space, including kitchen facilities.

The appearance of the building will be somewhat similar to Penick Hall, but it will have the entrance in the center of the building on the south side. There will be other entrances on both the east and west ends of the building.

Included in the dormitory plans will be a freight elevator, and all the modern equipment necessary to provide the services for the extra students.

It is anticipated that students will not be housed any longer in the Faculty House or East Rock Building; and the total increase in student body will be approximately eighty, of which not more than forty will be admitted in 1966. The remainder are to be added at a later date.

The total construction cost is $440,300, and the building was made possible through a loan secured from the Home and Housing Finance Agency. The loan is for the usual forty-year period and at the rate of three per cent interest.

Seniors Feast At Angus Barn

One hundred and four seniors of St. Mary's gathered for their annual banquet held at the Angus Barn last Tuesday.

A number of guests, including Dr. and Mrs. Stone, Rev. and Mrs. Melmsbee, Miss Richardson, and Dr. and Mrs. Fish attended this gala affair. Transportation was graciously offered by the senior day students and some of the adults.

After a delectable steak dinner, Dean Muchmore, class president, welcomed everyone and gave a toast to the class of '66. Individual students and special guests were honored with further toasts.

The class dance marshal, Debbie Willis, and her committee entertained with a skit entitled, "Senior Class in Review." Meg Christian sang some of the class's favorite songs. At the close of the evening, some students gave excerpts from Spoon River Anthology.

Order Of St. Genesis Formed

The Dramatics Club recently formed a new organization to honor those members who have done outstanding work in both the technical and acting phases of the theatre at St. Mary's. The Order of St. Genesis is named for the patron saint of the actor, St. Genesis the Comedian. Genesis was supposedly a Roman actor who was converted while impersonating a Christian and receiving a mock baptism on the stage. He was later beheaded for his beliefs.

Membership into the new society is based on attitude, enthusiasm, cooperation, and dedication. Members are inducted in a private ceremony. The officers of the society are, Mary Melcher, president; and Zan Deas, secretary-treasurer. Other members are Jody Burton, Linda Stott, and Lynn Stenson. The society has had only one induction thus far. Mrs. Nancy Stamey, head of the dramatics department, acts as advisor for the organization.
