GLEE CLUB PRESENTS CHRISTMAS CONCERT

The annual Christmas Concert was presented December 15 by the St. Mary's Glee Club.

The program included: "Masters in This Hall, Hear Ye News Today," a French carol arranged by Ehret; "Angelus and Pastores Ait," honoring Claudio Monteverdi's 400th anniversary; "Exsultavit spiritus meus" by Franz Burkhart; and several selections from Benjamin Britten's "Ceremony of Carols" with Claire Duff as soloist.

A group of men from NCSU, Raleigh high schools, and the Raleigh Oratorio Society joined the Ensemble in singing the Bach Cantata, "For Us A Child Is Born." Soloists were Donna Stephenson, Anne Sykes, and Donald Roberts.

Hutton Kent played the flute obligato in two Christmas Iullabies, "Sing of the Seven Lambs" and "A la hanita Nova," with Ann Cooper and Lucy Dunn as soloists.

Jose Peoples was the soloist in "Good King Wenceslas." In "Villancico," an ancient Puerto Rican carol, Judy Dunn and Adele Watkins played the castanets and tamborine.

To conclude the program, the Glee Club sang the French carol, "Willie, Take Your Tiny Drum," the Negro spiritual, "Mary Had A Baby," and by popular request, "Do you Hear What I Hear," repeated from last year's concert.

Directing the program was M'ss Geraldine Cate, who is also director of the Raleigh Oratorio Society. Mr. Michael Bulley accompanied the Glee Club.

In addition to the Christmas concert, the group presented a program at UNC on Sunday, December 10. Jill Bumgarner and Carol Lucas played two folk carols on guitars at this performance. Two solos were also presented, one by Donna Stephenson, "The Lamb," and another, "A Star Was His Candle," by Bonnie Ward.

JUNIOR CLASS HOLDS ANNUAL WHITE ELEPHANT SALE

On Thursday evening, December 7, the Junior Class held their annual White Elephant Sale. Jeff Cross, class vice-president, coordinated the various committees. Pridie Clark and Bradley Matthews, co-chairmen of the Decorations Committee, transformed the gym into a country store, the project theme. Armed with plows, feeders, yokes, bridles, bales of hay, and barrels, the committee created the atmosphere of a general store.

Ruth Shuping, Karen Thomas, and their Publicity Committee made posters to alert the St. Mary's girls of the upcoming sale. Polly Cozart's committee collected all the items to be sold and turned them over to the evaluation committee.

Three groups were most active the night of the sale. Ann Harrell's Raffle Committee sold tickets for the drawing of prizes. Frances Gilliam, Anne Holcombe, and their assistants sold I. O. U.'s. The Sales Committees sold the items while Michele Donovan, Denise Williams, and the members of their committee sold refreshments. A wide variety of articles was available for purchase. Anything from "True Trash" to peanut presents and from toys to cosmetics was sold. Used Odyssey and Mythology books, records, clothes, cookies, gum drops, pickles, popcorn, and cakes were also included. A record certificate to Stephenson's and a ten-dollar gift certificate to Nowell's were raffled. The cake walk also added to the festivities. The Juniors were dressed in blue jeans and hogwashers, and country music was provided.

State Department Representative Speaks to Students On Vietnam

On November 27, 1967, the student body enjoyed a talk by Robert A. Lewis, specialist in foreign policy and counsel in Saigon.

Mr. Lewis discussed the situation in Viet Nam and relations in Red China. By hearing a discussion of politics, religion, the elections, the people, and the military program, the girls were able to grasp a complete picture of the foreign situation.

Although some girls felt that Mr. Lewis did not answer their questions fully, this was justified by the fact that Mr. Lewis was not at liberty to elaborate to a great extent because of his position with the State Department.
