

GILLEY'S PROVIDES MORE THAN BEER

by Angela Patrick

It is plain to see that the country is turning to the cowboy image that was triggered by the movie "Urban Cowboy" and the rekindled interest in Country and Western music. Gone are the days of "Saturday Night Fever" and the BeeGees. The discos of yesterday are being replaced by "country" bars with bucking bulls.

One of the most famous western bars in the country is Gilley's in Pasadena, Texas. This bar is where the majority of the film, "Urban Cowboy", was filmed. Since the movie, the popularity of the night club has tripled. Mickey Gilley, the owner of the club and one of the contributors to the movie soundtrack, has taken the opportunity to strengthen his own finances by commercializing at great lengths. The bar was very popular with locals before the movie. As a tourist attraction, the club draws in many people visiting the Houston area. On a good night the club will have a packed house of over 4,000 people. The cash flow at this establishment is tremendous and one can easily assume that Mickey Gilley is doing very well.

The facade of the building is deceiving. From the front it looks like any other tobacco warehouse. Upon entering one can see tables, pinball machines and other attractions that cover about 4 acres. One can even get their picture taken on a stationary bull. The dance floor is always crowded with people doing the two-step or kicker dance. For sale they have anything one would desire ranging from T-shirts to the bull itself at the sum of 7,000 dollars. There is nothing particularly appealing about the place, but it does offer one the chance to become a real cowboy for awhile.

Felicia Wardlaw is "tighting up on that backstroke".

Valentine Gifts For Your Favorites

by Margaret Norris

When students around St. Mary's were asked what they would give their favorite teacher or administrator for Valentine's Day, here's what they said:

Mr. Murrey--a new tie

Mr. Jeffreys--some fresh lettuce and a chicken sandwich

Mr. Tate--a smokeless ashtray

Mr. McRae--a funny jokebook, a UNC bumpersticker

Mr. Dillard--an attentive class

Dr. Lado--a translator

Dr. Hume--a day's vacation, a non-volunteer report
Dr. Saxe--an organizer
Mr. Fish--a plain tie
Mr. Estheimer--a short definition of Religion

Dr. Jones--a conservative daughter
Mr. Rice--an unlisted telephone number

Dr. Bauso--a green pen that writes blue

Ms. Birch--a natural log cabin

Mrs. Burch--a guidebook to colleges outside of N.C.

Mr. Kraemer--a "whoopie time"

Test Your Potential

Please follow directions carefully.

Hold the square printed below to your face and blow on it for at least 10 seconds.

That done, read on....

If the square turned yellow, see your doctor.

If the square turned brown, see your dentist.

If it turned purple see your advisor.

If it turned green, see your banker.

If it turned blue with pink stripes, see your psychiatrist.

If it turned white with little frogs and strawberries, see L.L. Bean.

If it turned red, see your lawyer and make a will.

But if it remained black, there is absolutely nothing wrong with you, and you will be expected to show up in your 8:00 class on time.

ONLY 21 MORE DAYS UNTIL
