

Fabulous Fall Formal Fantastic Festivity

Once again the fall formal was a hit. It was held on Saturday November 13, 1993 at the Elks Lodge. Everyone at the formal was seeming to have a wonderful time with either friends or their dates.

Hats off to the High school SGA for doing such a wonderful job in planning the fall formal. Everyone believes you did a wonderful job. T-shirts were sold by SGA members for ten dollars each. The shirt includes a John Travolta dancing pose with a disco ball and lights and in the back a flaming inferno to go along with the theme "Disco Inferno." I asked an SGA member how they came up with the theme. They all decided on this particular theme because Disco seems to be coming back strong and gaining in popularity once again some twenty years later. The SGA members therefore agreed upon the theme and decided that they would bring Disco back in their own way for one special night.

As far as student opinions go, everyone seems to have had a wonderful time. Kumiko Kawata, who is a college sophomore, stated that, "I loved it, it was my first formal event and my experience was very enjoyable." Another college sophomore, Baxter Wagner commended the SGA members of high school and college by saying that, "it was very well planned and I had a wonderful time." Finally Ivey Dunaway, a college freshman commented to me that she had a blast! Overall everyone seems to be very satisfied with this years fall formal and is looking forward to the one held in the spring with great anticipation.

Again congratulations to all of the SGA members who worked long and hard to put together such a wonderful event for all of us here at Saint Mary's College.

Fall is well on its way, and so are the girls at S.M.C.!

Dean Jones has been seen walking aimlessly around the hall - don't worry, she's just looking for Jim!
A certain sophomore is moving up in the celebrity world. She has been seen with a married HBO talk show host.

Holly Newcomb, you might want to carry extra clothing around or else don't play with stray cats in the halls of Hampden-Sydney. Amy W. you and Matt were really helping your dad with the files in his office!

Has anybody seen Beth P. I heard her bed at school has been empty at night. Ivy, we hear your date was working on an ode of love to you after the formal. Tate T. I didn't realize you were the actress in "Dirty Dancing." You certainly did the moves on the dance floor Saturday

Dancing." Be careful Dean Hume, Mr. Mathieu, and Mr. Dillon. We hear 7-Even checks for id's, even men with grey hairs.

Kebbie B. where did you learn to Lambada?

Have a wonderful Holiday and Christmas, but be good.

New Club Appeals to Early Birds

This group of Saint Mary's girls is so busy that the only time they could find to get together was at seven o'clock in the morning. What do they do at that hour? They eat breakfast, talk about the book they have read the week before and maybe read something they have written themselves. They gather in the lounge on Lower Smedes every Friday morning. They also take their tales and stories into local nursing homes in the hopes of encouraging the residents to share their own stories. Interested? Call Harper Best or Carmella LaBianca. Anyone who loves to read and/or write is welcome! SILENCE!

Christmas Requests, Christmas Reflections

As Christmas carols blare from every radio station and decorations cover every available space at the mall, Saint Mary's students make out their wish lists. Being away from home sometimes makes it difficult to let "Santa" know exactly what you want for the holidays. Many students have resorted to collecting their favorite catalogs to send home to parents, friends, and boyfriends. Other students have left major hints through telephone conversations and visits as to what they would like underneath their Christmas tree this year. Some of the more popular items on this year's Christmas lists are trips, cars, clothes, jewelry, and (of course) money!! Freshman Nicole Kerr's only request for this Christmas is a boyfriend, whereas freshman Ashley Bell can't wait to give her mother a present, which is a plane ticket to come visit Ashley during Mother/Daughter weekend. Many students are hoping that their teachers will be swept in the Christmas spirit, and will give excellent grades to their diligent students during exam week. If not, we all pray that at least our parents will be so jolly, that poor grades will go unnoticed. As vacation time sneaks up on us and we stress out with what to do for those who are dear to us, let us remember the true meaning of the holidays is to spend quality time with those who mean the most in our lives and to make wonderful memories of the time we have now.
