There is a place where my friends have gone,
Who have finished their labors below
A place that's prepared for every one That endureth all things to the end Chorus.

That blissful place is the promised land,
By faith its delight I can see
'Tis the place of rest that remaineth there
For all of the people of God.

There is a place where I long to go When I'm called from this prison of clay,
A place that with milk and honey flows

Then my soul let it fly far away.

There is a place where my Savior's gone,
He's preparing a home for us there Although he has gone he'll come again
And he'll bid us his glories to share.

In a private letter from the above writer she says:—

Dear Editors,—

"The above piece is a favorite one of my own composition written upon the thought of departed friends. (I also have written music suitable to the same). If you wish, you can put this in some little vacant space in your paper. If you can endorse these pieces and think they are worthy notice and desire that I aid you any furthur I will strive to help you all that I can, and delight in so doing, for if there is anything on earth that delights my soul it is trying to do something that would better my own life and give light to those who are continually watching my steps. May the Lord ever direct our steps and give us more zeal for His great cause. Renew our energies to work for the advancement of His kingdom even though it be through the medium of a little paper like the Blue Ridge Baptist.

Light and joy can spring from it like seeds sown in good ground bringing forth fruit unto perfection.

I feel that this little paper has already done much good, hence there is reason that it can do much more good. There is no perfection in a stand-still point but we must go on to perfection. So I hope the good people will help the good Editors of this paper to expand and extend its influence until it becomes the topic paper of the day."

Yours Sincerely,

Lydia C Blackburn

Which Shall Burn?

Many a child has strayed off into the paths of sin and been kept fore-ever away from God for the want of parental control and correction. Yet, parents will say, "My children might be better off if they were corrected for their faults, but my love for them is so great that I can't bear to give them any pain." Is that love?

The Scripture says, "Love worketh no ill." It does seem that nothing this side of the judgment will reveal to many parents the awful weight of their responsibility! The world is dying for want of good family government.

Parents, do you realize the fact that you are holding the eternal destiny of your offspring in your own hands? Stop and think. You are!

Father, mother, if you have an infant son or daughter, remember that you are responsible for his welfare for time and for eternity.

O that the Spirit of God may burn this thought deep down into your souls! Oh, shall it be the lot of your child to burn in the flames of hell?
