

Bucknell Graduates Make Unique Test

Mr. B. LEWISBURG, Pa.—(ACP)—Do college graduates and education part company at commencement? With this question in mind, Arnaud C. Marts, president of Bucknell University, has invited the men and women who received diplomas from the college since 1936, 1937, and 1938, Mr. Marts asked this group of recent alumni to make a personal check in the extent to which they have maintained during their post-college years the intellectual interests fostered on the campus.

The Bucknell educator listed seven questions which college-trained men and women should ask themselves in appraising the extent of their self-education: "What are you reading? What are your activities in the fine arts and sciences? What are you doing to help humanity? Are you doing something creative in your leisure time? What are you doing for your health and strength? What about your inspirational and devotional life. Do you seek a few moments alone out-of-doors each day?"

A new milking process which excludes air from all steps of the process has been invented by an Ohio State University professor. Forty-three colleges and universities have student flying clubs.

One-half of all University of Vermont students receive scholarships.

The Collegiate World

(By Associated Collegiate Press) Day by day, in every way, science is making us better acquainted with ourselves and our neighbors. Not that we're demanding it, you know, but during the last two or three weeks science has found out a couple of things that you really should know:

Under ordinary conditions, your hands and arms contain about 8,000,000 micro-organisms, according to a Johns Hopkins University professor. This is a nice fact to add to your dinner-table facts collection.

If you're a devotee of the steam, you really should know that fish like red better than any other color, and that red-colored bait is best. At least a Northwestern University professor has found this out after many months of research. We suggest that you paste this one in the cover of your bait-box.

One of the chief topics of conversation — almost as bad as "Have you heard about my operation?" — is this subject of allergies. Sensitiveness to food, you know. Well, a University of California fact-gatherer has found out that 7 per cent of us have allergies, which means that some of us must be kidding ourselves, judging from the large number that claim certain sensitivities.

And all of you who have inferiority complexes because you didn't get a chance to play on the varsity will feel better after this new pill of self-reliance from Massachusetts State College: Researchers there have found that only 49 percent of the college athletes are active in social activities in later life.

Yes, science is doing everything in This Collegiate World to make us all feel better—or is it?

Tate Introduces New Plan In Societies

(Continued from page 1) that at Commencement, when all other medals are being awarded, that each society will present a medal to that person in the opposite society whom they consider the most representative of the high ideals of both societies. The ideals upon which they will be judged are the Euthalian dignity, simplicity, and conservatism, and the Philomathian truth, purity, and fidelity.

INFIRMARY BLUES

The other day a friend and "me" Went down to the infirmary. As we went walking down the hall, We ran "smack" into Ada Wall.

We thought that surely all was lost Until we heard "ole" Peggy Moss. And then someone let out a yell That proved to be Mary Mitchell.

Did I say this was all the blues? You should have heard them sing of shoes Of "vilest" red, from a "railroad man", As Ada, Mary, and Peggy can.

We went down to the first floor hall To see who roomed under the "Wall". 'Twas Clifton Powell, lying there Contented as an old brown bear.

Joe Greer was just across the way Trying to sing "Oh Happy Day", And then he joined in "Railroad Man" With Ada, Mary, and Peggy "Ann."

Suddenly from the first floor ward Old Worth Grant gave out a discord.

"Aw, Shut up, Joe! How can we sleep?" And Bob Wright echoed, "Can we sleep?"

To make me still feel quite at home They placed me here in this back room. The kitchen is across the way. But "nurse" won't let me help today.

Oh, shucks! It would be fun to dry Those dishes, Now don't ask me why. (Cause Kathryn Williams washes them; She'd fill one's joy-cup to the brim.)

Now there are other folks down here Who keep this place from being drear: Hawkins, Thompson, Essie, Harris

This will in no way endanger the literary rivalry that is always felt most in the inter-society contests at Commencement, but it is hoped and expected that this will do much to make the existing rivalry a more friendly one.

Give forth to every patient bliss.

I now propose a golden toast To white clad nurse of whom we boast:

"Miss Velma Shaw, we raise our cup, 'Tis you who help the sick folks up."

—James P. Kirk.

Tutorial System Proves Great Aid To College Students

HAMILTON, N. Y.—(ACP)—Additional evidence that the tutorial system is of great aid to today's undergraduates has been released by College University officials here.

After five years of using the system, Colgate records show that the student malcontent who is unable to adjust himself to his environment has been virtually eliminated.

"One great result of individual treatment has been a marked decrease in personality problems on the campus," one faculty leader stated.

The medical department revealed that the number of nervous breakdown cases per year has been reduced from five to one.

Under the Colgate system, individualization is brought to mass education. Besides conferences regarding classroom work, preceptors and tutors discuss the students' personal problems.

Glee Club Presents Impressive Program Last Sunday Evening

The string ensemble composed of Mrs. D. M. Robinson, Miss Mildred Gwin and Mary String-field rendered Prelude to "Lohengrin", by Wagner, during the delightful program.

One of the highlights of the service was the unusually beautiful selection, "Gesu Bambino" by Yon, which was given by Miss Ellison accompanied by Miss Gwin.

Members of the glee club who gave special selections were Helen Trentham, Louise Moore, Emma Weatherly, Elizabeth Coppedge, J. R. Evans, Francis Owen, Mary Padgett, Mary Fowler, Horace Small and Bill Baucom. Each number was well presented and voices blended together perfectly to give the audience a true feeling of Christmas.

Other members of the glee club who took part were Mary Ruth Hardy, Sara Orren, Lessie Summerlin, Aileen Kennedy, Anne Cochrane, Hazel Knight, Elizabeth Hines, Claire Hardin, Martha Fokes, Evelyn Evans, Bernice Carter, Elaine Kale, Mary Mitchell, Rachel Templeton, Gretchen Johnson, Janice Smathers and Sally Teague.

Louise Moore, Sara Lou Smith, Margaret Johnson, Katy Ruth Grayson, Virginia Terry, Altha Smith, Kathrine Perkinson, Juanita Ross, Mildred Mitchem and Dorothy McElwain.

William Avera, Joe Greer, J. C. Gill, C. C. Hope, Norman Harper, Sam Smith, David Hooks, Clyde Carr and Bill Daniels.

Horace Chamblee, Robert Carter, Banner Shelton, Roger Bell and J. B. Hensley.

The 25th anniversary of the founding of Wesley foundation work for Methodist students in state educational institutions was celebrated in October. The movement was started at the University of Illinois.
