

Letter From The Editor

Dear Friends:

"Published by the students of Mars Hill college" is printed in the masthead of this paper. Student ideas and interests are the chief concern of The Hilltop, and yet it is the duty of the staff to coordinate old principles and new ideas to the best advantage of all.

Naturally upon entering upon this subject or trend of thought, one is reminded of traditions and customs which have meant so much in years past to the reputation and standing of Mars Hill. It is generally agreed that this has been the case. However, Mars Hill campus at present is thinking about some of these traditions in the light of circumstances here and in the light of the influences, aims, and interests of those who graduate from this college today. The question here raised in my mind concerns the practicability and lasting qualities of atmosphere of the campus. Does life here help a normal Christian student to meet problems to come later? Of more importance is the question of whether or not the Christian interests and ideals made manifest here will be of the type which really hold students, or which will cause them to fall away from Christian work after leaving here. This has been the case in senior colleges lately and has been the source of much concern of Christian workers there.

Such problems, it is my belief, should be viewed objectively in as much honest, happy, Christian light as possible and handled accordingly. A more honest, open-minded Christian-like attitude is needed on the part of all concerned. If traditions are found harmful, will they not have to give place to newer, more normal ones?

Sincerely in Christ's interest, that Margie Crews was feeding at the table the other night. It surely looked Crewd! Careful, Margie!! Could it be the same boy who when asked on Dean Carr's history test the other day "Who or what was Vera Cruz?" promptly wrote, "The sister of Margie Crews; you can't fool me on my spelling." Nice work, ole boy. At least, you knew something about Vera Cruz!!!!
—Paul D. Early.

All hasn't been smooth here on the campus for the past weeks! Sam Smith said he never ran into Fowler weather than he did the other day. Oh, well! Every storm cloud has a silver lining—or another girl!! So don't worry, Romeo Smith!

Speaking of girls, did you hear a certain girl in the dining hall say the other day at dinner, "Oh, doesn't that new head waiter make the cutest announcements!!" Nice work, Bruce Brown. See me and I'll give you her name and address.

From my observations during the past few dating periods, one would gather that Hilda Stoker likes a Camp before her Bell now! How about that, Hilda?? And,

Orville, do you need a Stoker before your Camp????

While snooping in Asheville about a week ago, we heard that Helen Trentham was very fond of dime-store soup—slurrrrr!! Slurrrrr!!

Well, when it gets to the place that I have to go clear to Asheville to gather news, I think I'd better sign off, yeah????

Helen Trentham said I'd better have signed off two paragraphs ago. Please 'scuse me, Helen. I thought that the boys would like to know your likes.

Well, I'll be a seein' ya from time to time, or from Hilltop to Hilltop.

Just,
CRACKIE.

From the Associated Collegiate Press we find that something new in the line of students-managed insurance companies has cropped up on the Washington University campus on the edge of smoky St. Louis. There Enterprises, Inc., not only insure students against failure, but also against marriage.

But they only take selected risks on the latter kind of protection—and an attractive freshman co-ed has just been turned down because directors of the company decided their risk was too great! Boy, would I like to meet her?

Ah! Spring! The time when not only a young man's fancy but everyone's fancy turns to thoughts of love. Since this isn't spring and there is still quite a bit of cold time for concentration on good weather ahead, there is plenty of books. If one wants the type of book that suggests a rainy day, a bar of candy, and a cozy chair, he will not want to miss the new book, Disputed Passage, by Lloyd C. Douglas, who expresses his same fascinating philosophy of life in such a manner that once one starts reading, it will be difficult to stop.

Then for the hard working girl who finds home economics so hard and at times rather dull, there are the Good Housekeeping Marriage Book, by W. F. Bigelow, and Successful Home Furnishing, by T. M. Burrows. These serve to rouse the lagging interest.

Some other new and interesting books are Energy and Matter, C. B. Bazzoni; Drama of Chemistry, S. J. French; Divided We Stand, W. P. Webb; The Professor and Poems By Charlotte, Anne, and Emily Bronte, C. Bronte; Adventures in Genius, W. Durant; Frank Miller of Mission Inn, Zona Gale; Garland of Boys, G. Jones; and Tom Watson, C. V. Woodward.
