

Students Note Many Changes About Campus

Students returning to the campus for the second year have noted several changes about the campus. There is the new girl's dormitory, the new cafeteria under construction, Treat dormitory's change, new furniture in Spilman, the renovated Music building, and the changed cottage furniture.

The new Huffman Dormitory for girls is now in use. It is named for R. O. Huffman of Morganton, a former trustee and member of the buildings and grounds committee. There are three floors and accommodations for 123 students and seven faculty and staff members.

Work on the new cafeteria has progressed gradually, and the number of workmen has increased since the beginning of this term.

Treat, the oldest dormitory still in use, was redecorated during the summer. It now houses boys instead of girls. Some rooms have been divided into offices for the newly expanded personnel division of the college and for members of the faculty in the history department.

Spilman dormitory has been completely refurnished, and some improvements have been made in the boys' cottages.

Larger heating equipment is being installed in the Library basement, affording steam heat for the adjoining Music Building. Soundproof ceiling and rubber stair tread will be installed. New flooring is downstairs, and there is a total of thirteen new studios and practice rooms.

fourth string men in at this time. These men held the Indians "right where they wanted them." Cavanaugh came through with his third touchdown in this quarter. He made a nice 20 yard dash for the touchdown. Bill McIver kicked over the goal for the extra marker. Mars Hill was now out in front 40-0. With only a few minutes left to play, Brinkley ran for 20 yards for the seventh and last touchdown.

Other outstanding players of the game were: Rumbough, Brown, Clanton, "Red" Fleming, Whisnant, Sewell, Dillard, and McCracken.

Campus Guestbook

The following former students have been visiting on the campus recently:

J. Carlton Jones '42, now assistant coach for football at N. C. State College.

Myrtle Abernathy, now working with young people in her home church in Gastonia, N. C.

Caroline Wilburn '42, later received A.B. from Meredith and studied at B.B.I. She worked with Sunday School Board and is now working with Young People at Newton, N. C.

Woodrow Wall '37, minister of music and Young People's worker at the First Baptist Church, Asheville, N. C.

Hilda Mayo '46, W.M.U. State Young People's Secretary with headquarters at Raleigh, N. C.

Jo Fahrnestock '47, now working as secretary at Wahalla Garment Company, Wahalla, S. C.

Jeanne Norment '47, now working as Church Secretary at the First Baptist Church, Lenoir, N. C.

that his father had made for him a small two-brick mold as he was too little to carry the usual four-brick mold.

The efforts to raise money for this building were, perhaps, greater than for any other buildings on the campus. To make the final payment on the building, the trustees had to sell part of the original campus. The late George Tillery completed the building and accepted a lot in payment for his bill of eighty-five dollars.

Since its completion it has served in many capacities—for class-rooms, library, bookstore and now for music studios and practice rooms. It was in this building that the girls' literary societies had their beginning. For their meeting place, the girls improvised seats by laying boards across boxes on the west end of the first floor.

Last year, because of its inadequacy, some suggested that the building should eventually be removed; however, public sentiment intervened, and this summer its face was lifted. Now you will find part of the floors refinished, others completely new, a new heating system, and many other improvements. Unlike most historic old places, however, the music building has more than a colorful past. Better still, it has a glorious future

Mrs. Talmadge Stanfield (Gertrude Berry) '42, teaching in Danville City School, Danville, Va.

Doris Greene '47, worked with Baptist State Convention this summer and is now planning to go into educational work in some church.

The Y. W. A. was fortunate in having as visitors on the campus, Oct. 4-6, Miss Hilda Mayo, State Young People's leader, and Mrs. Roy Starmer, missionary to Roumania, who were working with the council as they made their plans for the year's work.

Miss Mayo led noon-day watch on Saturday and both visitors spoke at the evening worship service on Sunday night. All the Y. W. A. members met with the visitors on Saturday evening from 6:00 to 8:00, when light refreshments were served and excellent suggestions were made to the group. On Monday at chapel, Mrs. Starmer spoke in the college auditorium and Miss Mayo conducted the program in the Church.

Since Roumania is closed to missionaries Mr. and Mrs. Roy Starmer hope soon to go to Italy for a visit in the home of Dr. Dewey Moore, who taught a B. T. U. study course on our campus last year. They expect to remain in Italy as educational missionaries.

Dr. And Mrs. Moore In 51st Year Here

This present school year marks the fifty-first year of Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Moore's continuous service here at Mars Hill College.

Fifty-one years ago when Dr. Moore became president, the campus comprised only a little more than two acres. The enrollment was only 180, and the faculty consisted of three members. Through the years of Dr. Moore's and Dr. Blackwell's presidencies, Mars Hill has rapidly grown to its present enrollment of 960 and faculty of 72 members.

this college. The original name came from the French Broad Baptist Association which included all churches in this end of the state. Louis Palmer is reliably reported to have given the name "Mars Hill" to the college and community, basing this name on Biblical history. Other names, Moore, Spilman, Treat, Wall, Huffman, and many others, have come from the leaders and benefactors down through the years.

The most interesting story connected with the founding of the college, is the "legend of Joe." It is said that, when the trustees were unable to pay in full their bill, the contractors, Shackelford and Clayton, of Asheville, accepted and held as security, Joe, one of Mr. J. W. Anderson's slaves. This action caused the trustees to act quickly in acquiring the money to redeem Joe. Today Joe's grave is marked by a stone slab, placed there on Founder's Day 1932 when Joe's ashes were moved to the campus.

These are but a few of the facts with which all should be familiar. They help to make up the heritage of Mars Hill College up to this Founder's Day.

Two years ago Dr. Moore retired from active teaching, but Mrs. Moore continues to carry out her duty as bursar in an unexcelled manner. Both Dr. and Mrs. Moore continue to add to the friendly and Christian atmosphere of the campus by their presence here.
