

Survey Reveals Ideal Prof As Witty, Smart

(ACP) — Just what makes a good teacher? A survey at San Diego College, reported in the Fortnightly, shows that the ideal prof is:

West Speaks For M.H. In Tournament

Mars Hill was represented in the Baptist Young People's Speaking Tournament at the First Baptist Church in Asheville on April 16 by freshman John West of Tampa, Fla., who emerged victorious.

"In God Is Our Trust" was the title of John's speech. He chose this topic because he felt it was immensely pertinent to Christian living.

Last year when preparations were being made for the Speaker's Tournament, he was encouraged to represent the First Baptist Church of Asheville in the tournament. John chose as his subject "Transformed to Serve Christ." With this speech John reached the regional contest where he was runner-up to Yvonne Roberts, a Mars Hill freshman at that time.

Having enjoyed being a tournament participant last year, John decided that if time permitted he would participate again this year. A second motive for desiring to participate was a determination to write and deliver a speech capable of beating Yvonne Roberts.

expresses himself well, and the student does not need a dictionary to answer a question. He was an A student in college but won't mention it.

HUMOROUS — His key to avoiding dullness in class is humor. His jokes are fresh and the shy blonde in the corner of the room needs not fret about turning red.

DOWN-TO-EARTH — He has a large vocabulary but seldom if ever resorts to it. He does not have a superior attitude and can explain basic algebra without making you feel stupid, even though he knows it inside and out. He gives you the feeling that he wants to help you learn as quickly and as easily as possible.

WELL-DRESSED — His ties are not Ivy-League, and although he might wear the same suit three times in a row, he's neat.

INFORMAL — He's firm but not rigid. He will talk about religion or the Twist and kid the basketball team about the game it lost by 20 points without getting any scowls.

EFFICIENT — He gives students plenty of time and notice before a test and gets the results back quickly. He lets the class out early if there is no more to his lecture.

FRIENDLY — He never hesitates to say hello when he sees you in the patio and will chat about the football team or your favorite subject. He'll give you advice when you ask for it.

A GENTLEMAN — He never resorts to vulgarity. He jokes with the girls about their latest boy friends but doesn't embarrass the person who has been tardy three times in one week.

These are the things that make a student say, "That teacher's sharp. He's funny, but you learn."

FROM OTHER CAMPUSES ...

A "Leftist" organization has arisen at Warwick High School in Newport News, Virginia. This organization is comprised of left-handers who have joined in an effort to overcome their left-handed difficulties, such as writing, opening a door, shaking hands, and eating with right-handed people.

One of the students remarked that she had a hard time using scissors, another that she could not drive a car with a stick-shift, and still another that he could not make a telephone call in a pay booth without difficulty.

From Jefferson City, Tenn., Carson Newman College reports that it is having its same old problem of "more students than room."

Dr. Edouard Patte, conductor of the Presbyterian College Robed Choir, Clinton, S. C., is currently taking his choir on the annual spring tour through Georgia, Florida, and South Carolina.

At Wake Forest, Dr. Robert Howren, assistant professor of English, has resigned his post to accept a position as associate professor of English at the University of Iowa.

The Belmont Vision of Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn., reported that President Kennedy emerged second only to Sir Winston Churchill in a British public opinion poll to determine what man in public life is more respected by British youth. The result surprised the polltakers. Perhaps, Americans, it is time for another Boston Tea Party.

Ann Brookshire Wins Citation NFS Grant To Taylor

Sophomore Ann Brookshire has been awarded the Carolina Dramatics Association's highest honor, a citation for Distinguished Acting.

The award was made at the 40th anniversary festival of the Association in Chapel Hill last weekend. It was based on Ann's portrayal of Sarah Enloe in the Mars Hill presentation of "Nancy Hanks, Bondswoman."

The play, written in 1930 by a former Mars Hill student, Janie Malloy Britt, was originally produced by the Carolina Playmakers of UNC. It was chosen by the Association for presentation at this year's festival as a representation of the mountain region and its people.

The story of the play concerns the ancestry of Abraham Lincoln. According to a legend of the Great Smoky Mountains, Abraham Enloe (whose wife Ann Brookshire played) was the real father of Lincoln.

Joe Taylor of the science department has been awarded a National Science Foundation grant for this coming summer. He will attend a nine-weeks institute of microbiology at Southwestern Louisiana University at Lafayette.

The award includes free tuition plus $650 and travel expenses.

Albert Blackwell, son of President and Mrs. Hoyt Blackwell who recently received a Rockefeller Foundation grant for a year's study at Harvard Divinity School, has now been awarded a Danforth Foundation scholarship.

The grant provides four years of expense-paid graduate study at any recognized university in this country. The Danforth award will be held for him while he is attending Harvard under the Rockefeller grant.

'Friendship 7' To Highlight Dinner

The annual Woman's Recreational Association banquet will be held Tuesday night in the cafeteria to honor the incoming officers. The affair will also honor the girls who have enough earned points to receive their block-M for membership in the M-Blem Club.

Mrs. Charles Davis will be the speaker on the topic of "Friendship 7".

The new officers to be installed at this time are Elizabeth Ammons, president; Grace Jones, vice president; Glenda Campbell, treasurer; Aleta Welch, secretary and Starr Glover, recorder.
