Students Teachers Depart For 10 Weeks of Training

Fifty seniors have just begun or just concluded 10 weeks of student teaching in public schools in the western half of the state.

Eight finished their teaching under supervision yesterday, clearing a big hurdle toward certification by the North Carolina State Department of Public Instruction.

Forty-two others began their training—frequently called "practice teaching"—Thursday. They will work until Jan. 21 under the direction of an experienced teacher, putting into practice the theories they have been learning at Mars Hill.

The eight persons who have just completed their student teaching, their subject areas and the schools in which they have been working are as follows:

Hilda Gilpin, English and Latin, and Truett West, mathematics, both at Lee Edwards High School in Asheville; Lynda Gail Haynie, home economics, Mrs. Grace Carter Ray, girls physical education, Steve Spain, English, and LaDonna Jenkins, home economics, at the North Buncombe High School in Weaverville; Judy Ball, home economics, David Millard Junior High in Asheville; and Linda Barbour, third grade, Aycock School in Asheville.

Those who are just beginning their teaching, with subject area and school, are as follows:

Bessie Cline, Latin and English, Lee Edwards; Mrs. Judy Halyburton, biology, and Kees Auer, physical education and biology, both at Enka High School near Asheville; Marvin Carriker, biology, Maxine Letterman, mathematics, Harry Sprouse, physical education and biology, and Shirley Sorrells, mathematics, all at North Buncombe.

Mary Ann Holland, third grade, and Carol White, first grade, both at Weaverville Primary School; James Ingold, seventh and eighth grades, Flat Creek Elementary; Celia Childers, third grade, Ellen Havens, second grade, and Marion White, first grade, all at Red Oak School; Carolyn Senter, third grade, Fred Overton, seventh grade, and David Smathers, eighth grade, Barnardsville.

Mary Causby, third grade, Diane McElroy, fifth grade, and Peggy Roberts, first grade, Claxton School in Asheville; Trudy Davis, fourth grade, and Patricia Dixon, sixth grade, both at Ira B. Jones in Asheville; Shirley Ford, third grade, Eugene Rankin in Asheville; Jimmy Few, physical education, T. C. Roberson in Skyland.

Jean MacLean, art, Nancy Piper, history and English, and Barbara Rector, physical education, all at David Millard Junior High in Asheville; Sarah Cole, home economics, Owen High in Swannanoa; Barrow Fleetwood, mathematics, Lois Hawes, home economics, and William Smith, physical education, Cane River High near Burnsville.

Mrs. Iva June Neill, home economics, East Yancey High at Burnsville; Sandra Anders, biology, and Anita Walker, mathematics, West Mecklenburg High near Charlotte; Mrs. Sue Cantrell, mathematics, Thomasville High; Ronald Harvey, U. S. history, Morehead High at Leaksville; David Holcombe, dramatic and business, East Mecklenburg High near Charlotte.

Martha Jean Hickson, third grade, Beverly Jane Sullivan, third grade, and Libby Weathers, second grade, Wilmore Elementary in Charlotte; Cheryl Robertson, first grade, and Lois Shearon, second grade, Draper Elementary; Judy Lowe, fourth grade, Central Elementary at Spray.

Professionals Play Macbeth

A Mars Hill audience will be treated to a professional rendition of the great drama "Macbeth" at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 17, in Moore Auditorium by the National Shakespeare Company.

The performance is a late-schedule addition to the 1965-66 lyricum series. It will feature William Metzo as Macbeth, veteran Hollywood-Broadway actor Howland Chamberlin as Banquo and Elaine Sulka as Lady Macbeth.

The company was founded in 1962 by producer-director Philip Meister and Miss Sulka "to bring quality production of culturally significant dramatic literature to the nation." It travels as a self-contained unit with the most advanced modern theatrical equipment.

"All we need is a place to set up and electrical power," says Meister. "We perform anywhere under any circumstances."

Last year the company logged more than 20,000 miles in a 32-week trek. More than 140,000 people saw performances of Macbeth, Taming of the Shrew and Shakespeare's World.

"We had a few misgivings about how a major professional Shakespearean touring company would be received," says Miss Sulka, "but response exceeded our wildest expectations. Especially rewarding is the excitement displayed by audiences who have never seen live performances of Shakespeare by professional actors."

Macbeth is one of the most popular plays Shakespeare wrote. Translations flourish and widespread use of it has been made in teaching so that it has become the most widely-read of all the famous bard's tragedies.

Like its classic predecessor, Hamlet, the play has been under a most constant scrutiny by critics, scholars and academicians. Some see in the play a concentration on the theme of ambition, others upon the manifestations of fear and still others find it a morality tale of good and evil. All probably have some validity.

Economist To Speak

A nationally distinguished scholar in economics will deliver two lectures here Tuesday, Nov. 16.

Dr. Broadus Mitchell of the faculty of New College of Hofstra University in Hempstead, N. Y., who is also professor of economics at Rutgers University, will come under sponsorship of the Visiting Scholars Program of the Piedmont University Center.

He will lecture at 11 a.m. in the Library Auditorium on the subject, "What Is Wealth?" and at 2 p.m. in the same place on "The Changing Constitution of the United States." Discussion periods will follow each lecture.

Dean R. M. Lee will moderate the first session and Charlie Narvon of the business administration faculty, the second.

"All students in business and the social sciences are especially urged to attend; and, of course, all other interested students and faculty members are invited," said Miss Mildred Bingham, head of the Department of Business Administration, who has coordinated the lecture program.

A teacher since 1917, Dr. Mitchell is also a noted writer. His latest works include authorship and co-authorship in two volumes on "Alexander Hamilton" in 1957 and 1962 and "A Biography of the Constitution of the U. S." in 1964.

He is the second nationally famous scholar to lecture on the campus this month under sponsorship of the Piedmont University Center. The first was historian Dr. George Mowry, who spoke here Nov. 4.

Chapel Schedule

A varied schedule of chapel programs has been planned for the next two weeks by College Chaplain Robert Melvin.

The Rev. Durward Hofler, pastor of the local Methodist church, will be the speaker Tuesday morning (Nov. 9). He will be followed on Thursday by Dean R. M. Lee.

On Tuesday, Nov. 16, Nathan Porter, personnel secretary for the Baptist Home Mission Board in Atlanta, will speak; and on the following Thursday, Nov. 18, senior music student Norman Selby will lead in another student-produced musical program.

Who's Who Accepts 20 Mars Hill Nominations

All 20 of Mars Hill's nominees for inclusion in the 1966 edition of the national publication "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities" have been accepted, Registrar Robert Chapman was notified this week.

The list—10 men and 10 women, all seniors—includes the following: Dwight Childers, David Clapp, Rick Cothran, Ellis Fulbright, Andy Good, Tom Hall, Jackie Mitchell, Chris Pappas, Bill Rotan and Norman Selby.

Nancy Hall, Mrs. Judy Woodward Halyburton, Ellen Havens, Stella Lam, Rhea Lineberger, Martha Penley, Rita Ann Propst, Lois Sharon, Beverly Silverio and Carol White.

Brief biographical sketches of each will appear in the forthcoming edition of the publication, which is edited by Pettus Randall in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Drama Slates Rerun Tonight

A second performance of "My Three Angels," the fall drama production, will be given in Moore Auditorium at 8 tonight by the Dramateers.

The hilarious three-act play was applauded at its first run last night.

Director James Thomas anticipates tonight's performance to be even better due to the elimination of "rough spots" in the opening night production.

HMB Secretary Has Information

Authentic information on two programs sponsored by the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention will be given to interested students here on Tuesday, Nov. 16, by Nathan Porter, personnel secretary of the board.

The programs are summer missions work and "U.S.2" a two-year program for college graduates similar to the Peace Corps and the Journeyman Program of the convention's Foreign Mission Board.

As director of personnel for the Home Mission Board in Atlanta, Mr. Porter will be interested in talking to prospective 1966 graduates about the "U.S.2" program and to underclassmen as well about the summer missions program. He will have accurate, up-to-date information, application blanks, etc., for anyone looking ahead to next summer or thereafter.

He will also speak at 7 p.m. in the choir room of the Fine Arts Building to all interested students.

The group will be recognized at commencement next spring, and each will be presented a handsome engraved certificate suitable for framing.

A copy of the publication will be catalogued into the library, and additional copies will be available for interested purchasers.

The nominees were selected recently by an anonymous faculty committee appointed by Mr. Chapman as chairman of the academic standing committee. They were chosen for their leadership ability, scholastic standing and promise of becoming useful citizens after graduation.

Acceptance of the full slate of nominees reflects credit upon the entire college. This was the first opportunity that Mars Hill has had to submit names for possible inclusion. The publication is open only to juniors, seniors or graduate students at recognized senior colleges.

The 1966 Laurel will accord the entire group recognition in a special section, according to Editor Tracy Heath. Individual photographs of each person named in the Who's Who publication will be made soon and pertinent biographical information will be gathered, he said.

Home Ec Chapter Meets Thursday

The Mars Hill Chapter of the American Home Economics Association will meet Thursday night (Nov. 11) to hear Miss Elizabeth Wilson speak. A home economist with the Jesse Jones Sausage Co., Miss Wilson will discuss job opportunities for home economics graduates as well as tell about her own job.

A delegation from the campus, led by Mrs. Mary Howell and Miss Carol Kendall, attended the state meeting of the North Carolina Home Economics Association in Charlotte Thursday.

Two members of the chapter, Bee Mayo and Beth Douglas, were running for state offices, but results of the elections were not available at press time.

Time Lecture Due

Marine biologist Dr. Charles E. Jenner of UNC at Chapel Hill, will present an illustrated lecture at 7 p.m. Monday in Spainhour Hall.

Professor of zoology at UNC, Dr. Jenner will discuss "Biological Clocks and Photoperiodism." His appearance here will be sponsored by the Science Honor Club as part of the lecture series of the Collegiate Academy of the North Carolina Academy of Science. All interested persons will be welcomed.

Movies Scheduled

The movie schedule for Moore Auditorium during the next two weeks contains only two films in the following order:

Saturday, Nov. 13, "Dr. Strangelove" and Saturday, Nov. 20, "What a Way to Go."
