

Radio Broadcasts SOS

Dear Fellow Students,

The campus radio station (WMHC) is a long sought reality which is finally nearing completion. One large hurdle remains: the purchase of 6 RC-6A transmitters, one to be installed in each dorm or dorm complex. This type of Carrier Current facility is labeled a satellite system, and, due to the wiring on campus, the most practical to install. It is also the simplest to expand. This system was planned with the advice and evaluation of Low Power Broadcast Co. and engineers of the Inter-Collegiate Broadcast System (IBS), of which we are now a member. We have received further assistance in a variety of forms from WUTV at V.P.I. Depending upon sums received from S.G.A. and student-faculty contributions, we will order a corresponding number of transmitters. They should arrive by June 1st and be installed through WESCO during the first session of summer school. At this time we will begin testing of the audio signal and training interested students for air, and other station work. We should be "airborne" for the beginning of the fall semester. You can help us meet this schedule by contributing to the radio fund (make checks to MHC Radio Club Account — contributions are deductible) and, or, by attending the May 4th showing of "I Love You Alice B. Toklas" with Peter Sellers. (Sunday afternoon — 2:00).

A station has been built by a few despite the skepticism of many. It cannot operate without the help of many. We ask for your financial support and your participation in a project which can produce progress — through communication.

Sincerely,
Tim Ellmore
 Station Manager - WMHC

This is how the space in the Fine Arts Building looked last fall when a few interested students began serious work toward a long-awaited campus radio station. A quick trip up to the studios of WMHC (located at the back of the auditorium, behind the stage) will show any interested person how much work has been done this year. The transformation is amazing.

Harris to Speak to BCAA

The Business Club Alumni Association of Mars Hill College will hold its 30th annual meeting today beginning at 4:30 p.m. in the Library Auditorium. The day's activities will include a banquet at 7 p.m. in the Coyte Bridges Dining Hall with a reception following in the Faculty Lounge of Memorial Library.

Members of the Association are made up of former members of the Business Honor Club of Mars Hill College. Officers are President Jackie Mitchell, Vice-President Casey Frederick and Secretary Mary Anne Joyce.

Speaker for the banquet will be Mr. Edward C. Harris of Atlanta, Georgia, partner, Price, Waterhouse and Co. He will speak on the subject "What's In the Annual Report." Music will be furnished by Miss Connie Parker.

Mr. Ralph Jinnette of Goldsboro will be recognized as an honorary member of the BCAA. Honorary membership is extended to a graduate of the Department of Business Administration who has achieved notable success in the business world and who has made a worthy contribution to his church and his community. Graduating members of the Business Club will be welcomed into the Association by Mitchell. Bob Drake, president of the Business Club, will respond.

The Association members are currently making contributions to the Mildred Loraine Bingham Scholarship Fund and a project for the proposed Blackwell Building. Since 1960, in excess of $5200 has been received for the scholarship fund from which $1400 has been paid in nine scholarships. The recipient for the current year is Bob Pegg. The scholarship winner for 1969-70 will be announced at the banquet.

In addition to the awarding of the scholarship the BCAA medal winners, the Wall Street Journal medal winners and the SAM Award winner will also be announced. More than 50 out-of-town guests are expected.

Spock's Babies Now Adults

Nobody ever knocks a guy for writing a baby book, says Phyllis Dubrow in the UCLA Daily Bruin. And while the Joe McCarthys, the Rockwells and the Carmichaels get nailed with "extremist" labels, it just doesn't sound logical that a pediatrician would want to change the world.

But everyone forgot about Dr. Spock. The Good Doctor wrote a little manual about 21 years ago that promised to reveal The Secrets of Raising a Well-Behaved Child. Try to understand the kid, the doctor said. Listen to him. Don't tell the kid he can't have a nickel for a Hershey bar; explain to him why not. Don't yell at him; talk to him. Treat him like an individual.

"Spock" became a household word and Spock's Baby Book was faithfully placed beside the family Bible and the TV Guide. Mothers everywhere believed they were committing sacrilege if every they raised their voices against their offspring and got gray hairs wondering Where They Went Wrong every time the tyke shed two tears.

So by the time the little guy was five feet tall, he had the world on a string and his parents wrapped around his little finger. The world was his oyster; he could do no wrong.

But while Daddy could give in when the kid asked for an ice cream cone, when the kid wants a pink and blue world, there isn't much Daddy can do. The kid, however, still figures that's Daddy's fault.

So the kid goes to college believing the moon is his if he wants it. He wants the Multiversity and the Great Society to listen to him just like everyone else has all his life; he doesn't want there to be war any more and he doesn't want to go into the army.

He wants to change the world—and all of a sudden he's got a vote.

So here we are with a whole generation of Spock babies on the verge of adulthood. Re-enter the Good Doctor, unfurling a banner strangely matching that of his foster offspring. And this time it is to them he says, "Okay, babies, follow me."

Court Acts on Student Dissent

The U. S. Supreme Court has refused to hear the appeal of a group of students from Bluefield State College, W. Va., who contended their suspension from college was a violation of the First Amendment.

The students had been suspended after they were accused of disrupting a football game in October, 1967, and following the college president to a parking lot where they rocked his car and beat upon it.

In the majority opinion, Justice Abe Fortas, commented on the relationship of student protest and freedom of speech:

"The petitioners were suspended from college not for expressing their opinions on a matter of substance, but for violent and destructive interference with the rights of others. An adequate hearing was afforded them on the issue of suspension. The petitioners contended their conduct was protected by the First Amendment, but the findings (of lower courts) establish that the petitioners engaged in an aggressive and violent demonstration, and not in peaceful, nondisruptive expression . . . The petitioners' conduct was not clearly protected by the First and Fourteenth Amendments."

The case is considered important for setting a precedent on the boundary line between allowable freedom of expression and violent and destructive action.

Baptist Students Convene

"Journey Inward, Journey Outward" was the theme of the State Baptist Student Union convention held in Gastonia on April 18-20. During this time students representing colleges and universities throughout North Carolina explored the need for a balance between an inward, personal faith and an outward faith which ministers to the needs of others.

Miss Elizabeth O'Connor, of the Church of Our Saviour in Washington, D. C., discussed the mission outreaches of the church. These include a coffee house ministry, a Restoration Corps, which repairs broken-down slum tenements, a group which finds homes for destitute children, and a Vietnam Mission which helps war-wounded children. These projects are the outgrowth of Christian concern and dedication and are a journey outward guided by the journey inward of faith.

Nine students from MHC attended, including David Smith, outgoing president of the State BSU and Jo Ann Pace, newly elected Secretary-Treasurer.

On Sunday the black students from the various schools presented a challenge called "Black and White Together." During the singing of "We Shall Overcome" the leader alternately read the following two piercing statements. "The price of hating other human beings is loving oneself less." We shall have our manhood or the earth will be leveled by our attempts to gain it.
