

Editorial

The UNCA Game — No Spirit Shortage Here!

How 'bout them Lions!

Not only did the Mars Hill men show that they could contend with a highly ranked NAIA team, but Lion fans showed that they can back their team and let them know they're behind them.

And back them they did. The rowdies that showed up at the game were unmatched by any Mars Hill basketball game I have ever witnessed. Hockey sticks, kazoos, referee dogs and referee eye charts, and the Hill's imagination didn't stop there. Below is a slice of the craziness that went on during the game.

Photo by David Wachter

Chip Kiley was the typical Mars Hill crazy one found at the UNCA game on Wednesday, the 23rd.

Photo by David Wachter

Gary Boykin and Chuck Hill are pictured ready to defend Mars Hill with golf clubs.

And to see the Lion mascot duel it out with the funny looking Bulldog (some referred to it as a clam wearing a blue suit) just inspired the crowd more. The fans there were ready to make themselves heard.

It is unfortunate that turnout to all the home games can't be this glorious, but it's certainly a morale booster to the team to know their school still supports them. When they were down eleven points, Lambda Chi Fraternity went to work and got the crowd back on their feet, and we watched a Lion team rally to within a few points of winning the game. There is clear proof that fans backing their team and showing some school spirit can make a difference in the play of their team.

Not once did the opposing crowd try a cheer that the Mars Hillians didn't roar. Not once did the Lions score that the crowd didn't yell and stomp as loud as possible. And not once did our team give up heart.

That's college ball at its finest.

Letters To The Editor Where's The Real American Beauty?

It seems like everywhere I turn I see the ideal American beauty. Heavyish made thinness. Sexy yet innocent. Young. In almost every magazine, with the possible exception of Esquire and National Geographic, you see the "American beauty."

After a while it sinks in, that to be beautiful, you're apt to be like the models. The cosmetic industry thrives on making women more beautiful. The dieting industry thrives on making women more thin. For some, those who diet constantly, it could be deadly. The ads seem to say if you don't use "X" brand eye makeup, blush or lipstick you aren't pretty.

There is nothing wrong with trying to look good. An individual should do anything to help her feel good about herself.

Some people would say that women don't have to follow society. I'd ask you, people - how many girls that are overweight are models? Miss America? How many girls that don't wear makeup and don't follow society's standards are Miss America?

Many guys would say that girls' looks don't matter. Guys - how often do you find girls who are a little heavy attractive? We aren't talking blimp, just a little overweight.

Girls judge guys more on their personality than their looks. That's why we find unattractive men with attractive women than vice versa.

Women are bombarded with information telling them how attractive they should be. Next time you pick up a magazine, see how many ads there are with women telling them how they should look to the number of advertisements telling men how they should look. You might be surprised! — NAME AND ADDRESS WITH PHONE NUMBER BY REQUEST

THE HILLTOP

P.O. Box 1148-C
Mars Hill, North Carolina 28754

Editors: Steve Ferguson & Gina Worley
Staff Advisor: John Campbell
Advertisements Manager: Christel Young
Sports: Alisa Sampson

Creative Consultants: Stefanie Briggs
Wanda Dickey

Cartoonists: Alan Drumm
John Hooper
James Maxey

Office Staff: Edith Harrison

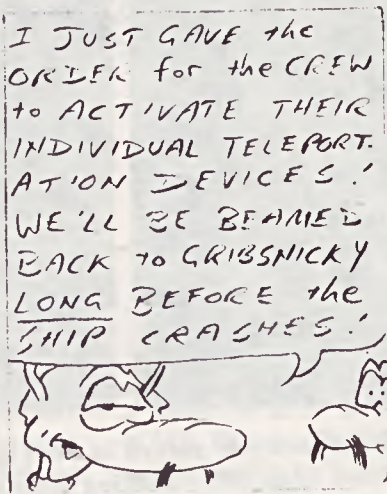

Photographer: David Wachter

Reporting Staff:
Shirlene Addison
Andy Behl
Tammy Buchanan
Jennifer Cadmus
Cynthia Crawford
Ken Edwards
Daniel Harris
Linda Judge

AP Associated Collegiate Press

FRÖÖKIE by JOHN D. HOOPER

EPISODE THREE

Z-B CONTINUED

New Jobs

Approximately 50 new on-campus jobs for students, announced by Bentley during the February Community Meeting, are being posted by the college's administration. The Hilltop for complete details on new jobs, and for the announcement sign-up date, which will be held at the end of the semester.

Vicci Teague was...
top of 1983 at a sp...
Coyte Bridges Din...
a junior elec...
for from Franklin...
lists picked by th...
taken on Feb. 2...
students were ask...
nominees in th...
this, 10 final...
pictures were f...
of the HILLT...
Vicci, Jennifer...
Mary Epper...
Rotan, Ka