THE HILLTOP

ume 62, Issue 1

Mars Hill, North Carolina

Friday, August 26, 1988

r. Donald Schmeltekopf: Upholding a radition of Caring and Excellence

cky Horner itor-in-Chief

Dr. Donald Schmeltekopf is exed about his new position as ovost of Mars Hill College, and kes his responsibility to provide a lality campus life for all students, culty and staff very seriously. In a emorandum dated June 1, 1988 and dressed to the Mars Hill College ommunity, Dr. Schmeltekopf outled ten commitments of the college. iese are ideals which are rooted in llege tradition and form the basis r its many programs, according to Schmeltekopf; they should be miliar to members of the campus mmunity. However, he states them is a means of renewing and clarifyg our common purpose."

The first two commitments are the less that set MHC apart from most her colleges. First, Mars Hill is committed to the Christian faith' id the "primary affirmation of this llege community is that every pect of our institutional life and ission is within the larger context of e purposes of God." Second, MHC committed to its students and their velopment: physically, socially, intellectually, morally and spiritually.

Of course, MHC is committed to providing a quality undergraduate education. In doing this, the college aspires to the pursuit of truth in every field, maintaining a policy of "fair play" with regard to the "expression and criticism of beliefs, ideas, research and related intellectual activities."

Other commitments include that of a quality campus life for students and faculty alike. This aspect covers all of the facilities — such as the cafeteria, housing and gymnasium, and MHC's commitment to the provision of a variety of co-curricular activities for all members of the college community deals with the programs which utilize these facilities — such as athletics, theatre and cultural events.

The college also seeks honesty in dealing with students and colleagues, the "ongoing professional development and enhancement of faculty and staff members," and positive relations with the outside world.

This year, Dr. Schmeltekopf plans on dealing with four areas of special concern in order to reach his goal of providing a quality campus life. These four areas are enrollment, program assessment, buildings and grounds and the budget.

In the area of enrollment, Dr. Schmeltekopf expresses his satisfaction with the current enrollment. The number of new students enrolled as of August 17 was 433, which represents an increase of nearly one-third over last year. This increase can be explained by a "sound approach to recruitment and by the hard and effective work of a lot of people," according to the Provost. In addition, the members of the student retention program are working hard and expect a high level of success in the coming years — their goal is 72-75% from year to year.

Another special concern is in the area of program assessment, which is being directed by new Dean of Faculty Earl Leininger, and carried out by the college Plans and Policies Committee. This study will answer such questions as the relationship between the majors and the mission of the college, the "balance between theory and practice" and the placement of graduates.

Dr. Schmeltekopf also intends to focus his attention on the maintenance and improvement of campus facilities, in the area of buildings and grounds. Recent developments include the renovation of Huffman and Edna Moore dormitories this spring and summer, and the refurbishment of Stroup, the apartments and the townhouses which is scheduled for next summer. Renovations on several academic buildings are also being planned.

The campus beautification program, which is directed by a faculty committee, is also contributing greatly to the appearance of the MHC campus. Members of the committee take pride in the work that they are doing to make our campus a nicer place to live, work and learn.

Another of Dr. Schmeltekopf's prime concerns is to ensure that the college operates well within its budget. The higher enrollment will be of great assistance in achieving this goal, according to the Provost.

Vhat Is a Provost?

Effective June 1, Dr. Donald hmeltekopf became Mars Hill llege's first Provost. Dr. hmeltekopf had been the Vice esident and Academic Dean of the llege for three years prior to that te.

The new administrative position of ovost was created last spring in der to lighten President Fred ntley's workload, thereby freeing ore of Dr. Bentley's time for college nd-raising campaigns. The Provost als mainly with the internal ornization and management of the llege, of which he is chief operating ficer. The President, on the other nd, is directly in charge of the ternal operations of the college, d indirectly — through the Provost in charge of internal affairs. Alough Dr. Schmeltekopf is responle for coordinating and providing dership to the various upper-level ectors of the college, he still ports to Dr. Bentley, who must give proval to all policy changes.

The new distribution of duties pears to be working quite well.

Provost Donald Schmeltekopf

President Bentley now has more time to solicit funding for the various parts of the Development Campaign, and Dr. Schmeltekopf can give his complete attention to ensuring that MHC provides a quality campus life for everyone.

Administration Makes Further Changes

Becky Horner Editor-in-Chief

The administration of MHC has undergone serious changes this fall, and the appointment of Dr. Donald Schmeltekopf as Provost left a vacancy at his former position of Dean. This opening was filled when Dr. Earl Leininger, former chairman of the Division of Humanities and twenty-year veteran of the MHC faculty, was promoted to the position of Dean of Faculty on August 1.

Dr. Leininger, who holds Bachelor of Divinity and Doctor of Philosophy degrees from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, has taught religion, philosophy and the year-old Humanities I course, as well as serving on a variety of committees, both on and off campus.

"I was looking for a new challenge," Dr. Leininger says of his position as Dean of Faculty, "and I think I found it." His new responsibilities include the development, coordination, implementation and assessment of the curriculum and the instructional program. He also supervises the various administrators within the departments of the academic program. Dr. Leininger also plans to continue teaching one course each semester, which will give him an opportunity to meet and talk with the students, something which he sees as very important.

Professor Betty Hughes will succeed Dr. Leininger as chairman of the Division of Humanities, which includes such areas as English, History, Modern Foreign Languages and Religion/Philosophy. A member of the MHC faculty for over twenty years, she has proven her outstanding worth on the instructional staff of the college, receiving the "Excellence in Teaching Award" several years ago.