

HOMEcoming 1993 COVERAGE

Student Perspectives

Mars Hill Lions' Homecoming Weekend Worthwhile

By Patrick Nelson
Hilltop Staff Writer

The Homecoming season has come and gone. There were many activities that went on during the week of September 20-25, ranging from a magic show and powder puff games to the parade on Saturday.

All students at Mars Hill had different opinions on how the week went and what they thought of it.

William Peacock stated, "The week was hectic because I was involved in most of the activities, but it also was relieving at the same time due to all the work paying off at the end." Peacock was a member of the Homecoming Committee, because of this he knew about all the work that was involved and the time that it took to get everything just right.

The co-chairperson Bethany Burgess said, "I was extremely pleased with how everything went. Late nights and early mornings were definitely worth it to make this weekend successful, rain, or shine." She also gave her thanks to the Homecoming Committee and the students by stating, "It wouldn't have been possible without the dedication of the wonderful committee and the support and participation of the students."

Another student, Tony Thompson, a freshman this year, said, "The functions held over this week were hard at times as well as fun, but over all I'm glad it's

Some students, on the other hand, had different views of the events held. "No one had time to really

"The Homecoming was exciting! President Clinton was there."

Alec Cort

over."

There were even some students that were excited about the homecoming week for different reasons; for instance, Alec Cort said, "The Homecoming was exciting! President Clinton was there." He said this because the president showed up for one of the skit performances at The Lions Growl.

enjoy the activities that were planned during the day because the majority of the students had class to go to. At least the Friday should have been put aside for the mini-carnival and whatever other plans the Homecoming Committee had planned, however, the Homecoming weekend was still exciting," said Milo Henderson, a first year student here at Mars Hill.

See Page 4

Chris Gibson gives the bannisters of the library some flair

Balloons like Kristian Wieda's were all over the campus during the festivities. They didn't lose their color when it rained, fortunately.

Organizations Compete For Spirit Doctors Say Growling Adds Pep

By Freda Banther
Hilltop Staff Writer

The Lion's Growl is a huge pep rally held annually for the purpose of building spirit and momentum for Homecoming weekend. The Lion's Growl for 1993 was held Friday night, Sept. 24 in Mearns Stadium with the annual campus decoration competition and Homecoming parade competition held the following day.

Each year for the Growl, which is sponsored by the Student Union Board, skits are prepared for entertainment and the reflection of the theme. Pride of the predator skits were very humorous for the event.

For the Greek organizations, participation in the three events is not only an opportunity to show school spirit, but also a chance to compete for prizes. The prizes were awarded to the group that best kept the theme for the 1993 Homecoming (Pride of the Predator) in all three events totalled. First place prize money amounted to $100 with lesser amounts for second and third places.

This year, Delta Kappa Theta fraternity won first, followed by Delta Zeta national sorority placing second and Theta Chi national fraternity placing third.

Among the notable skits was one by a non-Greek organization, the Ladies of Distinction or

L.O.D. They fashioned a comedy-drama courtroom scene in which a Mars Hill football player was on trial for the murder of a Wingate goes up against a predator such as a Mars Hill Lion.

The MHC Cheerleaders also highlighted the Lion's

HOMEcoming 1993 COVERAGE

player; the verdict was that the Lions' player was guilty, but the plaintiff had to understand that that's what happens when one

Growl with an exceptional dance routine ending with a pyramid formation and chants to get the crowd involved.

See Page 4

Her Highness, Queen Carol Jo Howell working on Moore before her ascension to the throne.