The last few weeks has kept us cooped up in our dorms and apartments. All the snow is bound to make people get small portions of cabin fever. I know how you feel. Unfortunately, I was trapped in the blizzard during Spring Break of 1993. Lucky for me, my roommate's family took me in until the weather cleared up. Besides the company of her family, I focused my thoughts on "keeping warm things." It was just a few things that helped me forget about the snow outside. I made a mental list and before I could think of other things to add the snow was gone. It was still freezing temperatures, but at least the snow was gone. So keep warm and maybe my list can help you see sunny days again.

Top 10 "Keeping Warm List"

1. Dreams of being on a beach.
2. Classes are canceled!
3. It's a good time to hug a lot.
4. It's a good time to kiss a lot.
5. Anytime is a good time for #3 and #4.
6. Classes are canceled again!
7. Mom is thinking about you a lot and she is preparing a big package to mail to you.
8. Your professor is snowed in.
9. You have a reason to pig out on junk food.
10. You can stay in bed all day.

What does it take for a guy to get a girl interested in him, or at least notice him? This question has bugged me for all of my teenage years. What do girls go for? Humor, brains, muscle, looks, or money? I'm totally clueless!! Whatever I seem to do just doesn't work. Girls perplex me with utmost frustration. I'm pretty shy when it comes to girls, but please don't hold that against me. I've heard a rumor that girls go for guys who have had girlfriends before, because they realize that the guy can handle relationships and stuff like that, but this is beginning to sound like one can't get it because they have no credit record, or applying for a job, but not getting it because they have no experience. How do you get experience without the job?? Duh! I've tried my darndest to be a really cool person, but it just doesn't seem to be working. If girls would take some initiative with guys they are interested in, it would take a lot of pressure off the guys. Why stick with the old fashioned way of doing things, I wish people would be very forward instead of beating around the bush.
