LAWYERS BAD OFF

Low Income in Halifax For Beginners—Doctors and Dentists Fare Better

Halifax County has a total of 30 lawyers, 6 of whom receive less than $1,000 a year for their professional services; 24 doctors, of whom 1 receives less than $1,000 a year, according to their individual statements, made to representatives of and recorded in the Department of Revenue. The professional man who received less than $1,000 a year for his services the year before, which, of course, includes those just beginning to practice, have to pay only one-half of the $25 license fee imposed on those making more than that amount.

Figures compiled in the Revenue Department show that slightly less than one lawyer out of three, 30.75 per cent, or 638 out of the 2075 paying the license fee to practice, made less than $1,000. Doctors fared better, only one out of 15 or 13.4 per cent, or 268 out of the even 2000 paying the fee were entitled to the half rate. Dentists almost reached the lawyer class in compensation for their services, one out of five, 20.05 per cent, or 137 of the 684 listed as paying received less than $1,000 a year.

The N. C. year book lists 2266 lawyers, the State collecting fees from 2075; it lists 2049 doctors, the State getting fees from even 2000 and lists 732 dentists, 684 paying license fees. In some cases, of course, the men are inactive, teachers or engaged in other activities.
