Chapel Program By Seventh Grade

Wednesday morning, October 29, 1930, the Aurelian Springs student body and faculty assembled in the auditorium for chapel, which was given by the seventh grade. The program opened by the audience singing "America The Beautiful." The devotional was given by Maude Elizabeth Wilson and prayer by Claudelien

Lewis. The program was centered upon "Evangeline," by Longfellow and was splendidly carried out.

The first number on the program was the introduction of the program by Thelma Harper. The next number was an original picture book of Evangeline which was shown by Claudelien Lewis. This was followed by an original song, "Evangeline," by Edgar Thorne, Claudelien Lewis and Nellie Mae Collier which was composed by Louise Heptinstall. The last number on the program was a play "Evangeline," which was enjoyed by everyone. This program proved to be one of the best ever given by any grade in the Aurelian Springs High School.

Election Is Watched By School Students

The election was held in the Aurelian Springs High School auditorium Friday Nov. 4 for the Butterwood township. This proved to be very interesting and valuable to the history and civic students. Mr. Clark, the registrar, gave very interesting and efficient explanations of the entire process of voting. Any pupil from the various classes were allowed to ask questions concerning the election of the officials. The holding of the election here was not only of convenience to the voters but was also very beneficial to the students.

DEBATE BY TARHEELS

(By E. K. Veach)

The Young Tar Heel Farmer Club presented the best program of the year Thursday at their regular meeting. It was a debate on the following query, Resolved: That Cooperative Marketing Is Better Than An Open Market.

The affirmative was upheld by Milton Sledge, Clyde Glasgow and Henry Cook. While the negative was upheld by Michael Cook, Whit Neville, and J. W. Lewis Jr. This was a rather close debate but the judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

This being a question confronting the community, state, nation and the world today created much interest and enthusiasm in every member of the club.

In a debate of this kind it gives a chance to study every angle of the marketing situation as it really happens in our country at the present time.

We may not know how every product being produced today should be marketed, but there's nothing keeping us from learning more in details the various ways which we may dispose of the surplus products we have for sale.

I think the main idea the program committee had in mind while making out this program was to create more interest and cause the farmers of tomorrow to study this marketing situation, which is one of the most critical things facing our country at the present time.

Still In Japan

Tokyo, Japan, Nov. 4, 1930.

Dear Mother and Father: It is raining in Tokyo today. You should see the funny rain coats and shoes the Japanese wear. The rain coats are made of straw, their hats are too, but they wear wooden shoes that have a funny piece under them to keep them off the ground.

Miss Siavage said that we would have to leave here after this week as we have so many countries we want to visit before we come home. None of us are homesick but all would like to see our mamas and papas.

With love, your little boy,

REID WARREN.

Since we have been visiting in Japan we are learning to be better house keepers. Everything looks clean here. You never see paper on the floor in a Japanese school.

Primary News

The beginners are building Tan a house. They have built one of clay, of paper and now they are working on a wooden house. Some of the children made one of blocks like the one they read about.

The beginners enjoyed a nice Halloween party Friday afternoon. The shades in their room were pulled down and the room had a spooky appearance with jack o'lanterns and hats the children made and wore. The children enjoyed Halloween songs, stories and poems. Then they played pinning the cat's tail on, John Edward Perry winning the prize in this. Refreshments were then served, those being candy and cakes made in the shape of jack o'lanterns by one of their grade mothers, Miss Carrie Bowers. Several guests were invited.

The beginners are glad to welcome Phil Taylor and Margaret Aycock back to school. These little folks have been quite ill. They are sorry Mildred Price is sick with mumps and hope she will soon return.

HALLOWEEN FESTIVAL

On last Friday evening from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock a great number of people enjoyed the Halloween Festival sponsored by the grades. A short program was given by the 7th grade which was enjoyed by everyone. Afterwards a number of side attractions were equally enjoyed.

We wish to thank Messrs John Liles, C. L. Kelly and Jim Liles for their contributions to the country store.
