Chapel Program
On last Wednesday morning, the faculty and students of Aurelian Springs School assembled for regular chapel.

Exercises opened with a song, "The Spanish Cavalier." Following was the devotional and prayer by Rev. Mr. Wilson, who gave us a short and interesting talk. Next an elimination contest was held for the cotton essay contestants. The subject being—"Cooperative Marketing—Its Progress and Its Future." The four speakers were Jess Liles, John W. Heptinstall, William Arrington and Alson Thompson. The judges had much difficulty in deciding, but finally William Arrington was chosen for first place and Alson Thompson second place.

Then Miss Gunn rose and lead a rousing cheer for the debaters who went to Chapel Hill Thursday. We also sang the school song. Exercises closed with general remarks and announcements by Mr. Matthews.

The Epworth League
The Epworth League met April 19, for the purpose of installing our new officers. Our preacher, Mr. Wilson, conducted the meeting. It was opened by a song, after which followed the devotional.

Each officers duty was read by Wilson, and each solemnly vowed to do the very best he could while in office.

They sang another song after which they repeated the League benediction.

We sincerely hope that these will be the very best officers that we have ever had, but we can assure them that they will have to work.

Grammar Grade Operetta
Next Thursday night, April 28, the grammar grades of Aurelian Springs High School will give their operetta, "Let's Go Traveling." Many lands are represented in it. You will see beautiful Chinese costumes, Irish jigs, Negro minstrels, the Stately Virginia Reel and lovely dances. The costumes of eight foreign lands will be shown.

The fourth grade of Aurelian Springs High School is busy making costumes for the grammar grade operetta, "Let's Go Traveling." Their costumes will be Irish. Clarence Carter will take the part of Patrick O'Flannigan, a country goosoon. The other members of the grade will sing "When Pat Goes to the Fair."

Bear Swamp
The B. Y. P. U. met Sunday, April 19, 1931, and gave an interesting program. Those taking part on this program were, Agnes Chichester, Ruby Saunders, Ila Mohorne, Joe Speight Brown and L. L. Bowers.

Mr. V. C. Matthews made a talk on "Origination." We were very glad to have Mr. Matthews with us and also his talk was enjoyed by everyone. We hope he will visit us again soon. We were very glad to have so many visitors present and hope they will come back again.

WHY THEY JOIN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Colton was very proud when he was pledged to a fraternity, and when three months later he was initiated, and one of the brothers attached a jeweled pin to his vest he was delighted.

If some one had asked Colton what motives induced him to become a member of the organization he might not have been able to give a convincing answer immediately, but it was not many months before anyone who knew him well could have given the reason. Colton had no thought of contributing anything to the advantage of the organization. He was in it only for the prestige or the power which it could give him.

He was politically ambitious, and he expected his fraternity to further these ambitions in every way possible. He had no special principles to guide his actions except the principle of self-advancement.

Outside of the organizations to which he belonged you would not hear a great deal of Walters. He was not a man who pushed himself into the front seat at any meeting he attended. He was not disgruntled if he did not sit on the platform when prominent people were in town. He never wanted an office, and if his name were suggested he could always conjure up some good reason why some other man was better fitted for the place than he himself was. But he knew every man in his fraternity, and he liked everybody and everybody liked him. There are all sorts of men in any group of thirty or thirty-five, but Walters seemed to understand each man's own peculiarities and to be able to adapt himself to his particular idiosyncrasies. It was to him that each man went when he was in any sort of trouble or wanted help of any kind.

Walters had joined the organizations to which he belonged not so much for what he could get out of them but for what he could put in. Having joined, he felt his obligation to contribute something. Unselfish as he was, never looking out for his own advancement, he yet got more pleasure and profit from his association than did Colton who never gave a thought to anyone but himself.

LOCAL RADIO MAN DESCRIBES NEWEST SUPERHETERODYNE

8-Tube Receiver in "Superette" Cabinet Introduced by RCA Victor

A new, full-fledged 8-tube superheterodyne receiver, housed in a miniature cabinet, and combining for the first time two of the most famous trademarks in the world—mousetraps and radios, has just been received by J. C. Smith, local authorized dealer, from the RCA Victor Company in Camden, New Jersey.

The new instrument, which will be known as the RCA Victor Superette, embodies all the advantages of full-sized superheterodyne performance, with an improved type of variable tone control, and employs two new super-control Raditrons, the announcement stated.

"This is the latest achievement of the world's greatest group of radio engineers," said Mr. Smith. "The Superette is not a limited range radio receiver of the so-called midget type, but a full-fledged superheterodyne instrument containing every important feature of modern radio design, in addition to advantages inherent to its size. It was designed to provide selectivity and sensitivity comfortably in excess of normal broadcast reception requirements, and is expected to set new standards in the 'small radio' field."

According to Mr. Smith, new principles of engineering design and manufacture have now made it possible to put on a fully-developed, complete superheterodyne in a small cabinet. Cabinet experts and acoustical engineers have made important contributions in housing an eight-inch cone dynamic loudspeaker in the scientifically constructed baffle area of the Superette. The exterior appearance of this instrument is in keeping ing with the artistry and skill that is responsible for the interior.

In addition to the new super-control Raditrons used in the first radio frequency stage, and in the intermediate frequency amplifier, the new instrument employs a UY-224 as first detector; a UY-227 oscillator; a UY-227 second detector (power); two UX-245 audio amplifiers, and a UX-280 rectifier.
