World's Fair Visitors to See Inner Workings of Modern Elevator

Nearly everyone has had the suppressed desire to peep down an elevator shaft to see the inside workings and the opportunity to do this will be furnished visitors to the Otis Elevator exhibit, at the top of the Sky Ride at the Century of Progress in Chicago.

Through shatter-proof glass panels, visitors may look straight down into the elevator hoistways. They can watch the illuminated elevator car as it drops rapidly away into space, down into the pitch black shaft until it is a mere pin-point of light 600 feet below. Then, after a pause, they will see the steel cables begin streaking upward again. The light will grow brighter, slowly at first, and then more rapidly until the top of the car suddenly looms into view and comes to rest at the top landing—exactly at floor level.

The automatic control equipment, the safety devices, the powerful hoisting machines that operate these elevators are the same as those installed in the world's greatest skyscrapers. But of the millions of people who ride in office building elevators every day, few are privileged to see the elevator machine rooms.

In the Sky Ride towers, however, these machine rooms will be open for inspection. This will be the first time the public has been invited behind the scenes to see what makes an elevator work.

The motor-rooms at the tops of both towers are the Otis Elevator Company's contribution to the Century of Progress Exposition. They are the highest exhibits at the fair.

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby.
