

SUPERIOR COURT IN SESSION

MATTHEW'S BOND SET AT $5,000.00 IF APPREHENDED

Superior Court convened Monday for the trial of criminal cases, with Judge Clayton Moore, of Williamston, N. C., presiding.

A number of cases have been continued, among which are: State vs. N. Shaheen and Leo Shaheen; State vs. Royal Daniel, Jr., alias capias and continued; State vs. Clyde Smith; State vs. William Warren; State vs. Odell Scott; State vs. George Livesay; State vs. Richard B. Miles; State vs. Will Talley; State vs. Ray Crawley; and State vs. Henry Gurkin.

The case of E. A. Matthews was also continued, but the Court ordered that when the defendant is apprehended his bond be set at $5,000.

In the case of State vs. Patrick Coleman and Junius Price, the defendant Coleman was called and failed. Judgment was nisi, sci fa, capias and continued as to Coleman. As to defendant Price the judgment was alias capias and continued.

Sarah Lee Wade, who was tried for forgery, plead guilty. She was sentenced to State Prison for six months. Judgment was suspended on condition that the defendant pay the cost and is not guilty of forgery within two years.

In the case of State vs. Sam Harper, which is an appeal from Recorder's Court, the defendant plead nolo contendere upon charge of destroying personal property. Judgment was suspended provided the defendant pays the cost.

In the case of State vs. James Jones a true bill was found charging the defendant with larceny of an automobile and with driving while drunk. The defendant plead guilty and was sentenced to be confined in the common jail of Halifax County for twelve months, to be assigned to do public work under the direction of the State Highway and Public Works Commission of the State of North Carolina.

In the case of State vs. Dolphus Woodruff, which is an appeal from the Recorder's Court, the defendant plead nolo contendere upon charge of carrying a concealed weapon. Judgment of the Court was not entered.

UP AND DOWN The Avenue WITH THE EDITOR

(Continued from page one) perience in the past. With attachments pouring in, they were delayed several hours in leaving Halifax County Sunday. Finally bonds were fixed, other legal tangles untied and the boys and girls rolled away to the next bunch of "suckers."

It appeared to be a very interesting carnival. They tell us the big side show with the freaks, the Mermaid and the dancing girls did the biggest business. The writer's main reason for not knowing first hand was that he had to take care of the children.

There was one act which should receive just praise. We waited two hours to see it, but it was worth it. We mean the lion act in front of the grandstand. While the rest of the "free acts" were very ordinary, this lion act was worth the price. What a woman. Five lions in the same cage and all afraid of her. Thing of her poor husband.

The Avenue will soon be sporting three new NEON signs, the kind with bright flare. New signs will adorn each of the theatres and the third sign will be displayed by Rosemary Drug Co. A perpendicular sign will be hung at each theatre and the marquee of the Imperial will also be trimmed with Neon tubes.

Nothing adds to the looks of a town more than a well, brightly lighted business section. People feel more like buying from such a place. Lights help get you in the mood—that cheerful mood when all's well with the world. We congratulate these business firms and hope others can soon follow their example.

The new sign for the Peoples Theatre will mark the passing of another old landmark. The sign now in use is the first electric sign ever used in Roanoke Rapids and is still the only moving sign. A circle of colored lights at the top, chase each other around, while the lower part flashes off and on.

STANDING ALONE

For just a moment, in the next spring, there seemed to be a renewed popular interest. The crowds flocked around Jesus in the old familiar way; the disciples noted it joyously. "The multitudes come together to him again," they exclaimed and at once their hopes were busy with new visions of his success. But dismay followed fast. Against their ardent protest he carried them off into close retirement. They were restless, lonely, distressed at the high handed fashion in which he turned away supporters.

Was it necessary to be so harsh with the Pharisees? Why should he have ridiculed them out of his company? Why tell people that their precious ritual was less acceptable to God than the cry for mercy of an untaught publican? Why slight their ready hospitality in favor of an outcast like Zacchaeus. Jesus' little group of friends were still groping for a clear vision of message and purposes when for the last time he led them down to Jerusalem and the final feast.

The one week of his life which everybody knows is the last week. Hence we pass over it in these articles. It began with the triumphant shouts of "hosanna"; it ended with the bloodthirsty cries of "crucify."

Between the first morning of triumph and the last hours of mortal agony it witnessed his finest verbal victories over his opponents. Never were his nerves more steady, his courage higher, his mind more keen. Deliberately he piled up the mountain of hatred, knowing that it would kill him, but determined that there should be no doubt through the ages as to what he had stood for, and why he had to die.

geous manhood ought to read these final chapters at least once a year. Any attempt to abridge or paraphrase them would result in failure or worse. We pass over them in reverent silence, stopping only for a glimpse of a most wonderful scene.

It is the final supper on that cool, quiet Thursday night. He knew that he should never meet with the disciples around the table again. All the memories of the three great years must have crowded into his mind as the meal progressed.

And this was the end. His relatives had turned their backs on him; his home town had scorned his advances, his best friend had died doubting; the people had turned away, and his enemies were about to triumph—is there any other leader who would have stood forth unbroken by such blows?
