

SALES TAX WARNING

A warning to merchants in his district who have not filed sales tax returns was issued today by Quentin Gregory, Deputy Commissioner of Revenue, as follows:

"Many merchants in this territory apparently have failed to file sales tax returns for the quarter ending October 1st. These reports were due to be filed by October 15th. All merchants have been advised of this by letter from the Department of Revenue, in which they were instructed they should not wait to see the Field Representative before making their returns unless they found it impossible to make it otherwise.

"A list of delinquents in this territory will be furnished from the Department of Revenue within a few days and we are anxious that none of the merchants in this territory shall be found delinquent and penalized for default in payment of this tax, which they have collected from their customers.

"I am urging the merchants who have failed to file their returns to immediately do so, and if necessary, to get in touch with me about it. This is extremely important from their standpoint, as well as the standpoint of the Department of Revenue, which at all times, is ready to assist and cooperate all possible."

Revenue Collection For Oct. Increases

Internal revenue collections in North Carolina for October, just passed, reached $19,215,079.46, a gain of $4,650,818.10 over the $14,564,261.36 for October, 1932, Chas. H. Robertson, North Carolina collector, reports.

This brings the collections for the four months of the fiscal year to $80,567,787.00, or a gain of $12,893,465.81 over the $67,674,321.19 collected in the same four months of last year. October collections did not reach those of September, because income installments were due and paid in September, Mr. Robertson said. The bulk of the tax is for stamps on cigarettes.

The rutabaga-eating champions are Oliver Dubois and Walter West of Cumberland, Wis., who each put away five quarts of cooked rutabagas at one sitting.

President's Advisers on Managed Currency

Herewith are pictures of the men who are generally credited with occupying important positions in the direction of President Roosevelt's monetary policy as regard a managed currency and the purchase of gold to establish the commodity dollar. On the left is Professor James H. Rogers, economist of Yale. On the right is Professor George F. Warren of Cornell. Insert is Dean Acheson, under secretary of the Treasury, who acts during the absence by illness of Secretary Woodin.

REPEAL COUNCIL WILL NOT CONTINUE

Raleigh, Nov. 6.—The United Council for Repeal of the 18th Amendment in North Carolina has no interest beyond November 7th, and will pass out of existence soon after that date, Walter Murphy, director of the campaign for repeal, stated last week.

"The council has never discussed the Turlington Act or the possibility of a special session of the General Assembly to repeal or modify it," he said. "And, personally, I have no interest in such a session," he added. "I do feel, however, that the next legislature will reflect the popular vote in the liquor legislation it may enact, whatever the vote may be Tuesday," he stated.

"Our interest is that North Carolina will follow in line with the other states in the President's recovery program." Mr. Murphy said the religious issue had again been raised, but that it was confined largely to rural sections.

Secretary of State Stacey W. Wade expressed what is a general accepted belief of those who know Governor Ehringhaus, in these words: "I do not believe enough pressure could be brought to bear on Governor Ehringhaus to cause him to call a special session of the General Assembly to deal with the liquor law, or any other legislation, for that matter, unless it be for some dire calamity."

Governor Ehringhaus alone can call a special session. He must have the vote of the Council of State to do it, but he can refuse to call it, even if the Council of State votes for the call. No one who knows him and his views believes that he could be induced to call the legislature together except in case of extreme emergency. It is therefore safe to assert that nothing will be done with the Turlington Act until the next regular session of the General Assembly in 1935, regardless of the vote Tuesday.
