"Waffles"

Waffles are universally liked. They may be served for breakfast, lunch or supper. Because of the endless number of variation that can be made in the waffle recipe to make it a meal within itself, they may be served more frequently. They are easy to prepare and inexpensive according to the richness of materials used to add variety. Try these recipes on those new electric waffle irons that were received Christmas.

When using an electric waffle iron follow the directions which come with that particular iron. However, if you have no directions a new waffle iron should be heated, then greased thoroughly before using. After that it is not necessary to grease it again.

If there is no indicator on the iron, preheat for 5 or 6 minutes and bake the waffles 2 to 3 minutes. Clean the grids with a dry brush, never immerse in water, and wipe with a clean cloth.

A tablespoon of batter to each section is all that is necessary.

Waffles should be eaten as soon as baked; but if they must be kept hot, lay each waffle separately on the open grating of the oven shelf. Never pile them on top of each other.
