Hauptmann Trial Grips World Attention

In this scene from the tiny but world-famed Flemington, N. J., courtroom, during the trial of Bruno Hauptmann on the charge of the murder of the Lindbergh baby, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh (1) stares straight ahead, as if in deep thought, while Bruno Hauptmann (2), the accused, mutters an aside to his wife. During the first days of the trial, Mrs. Lindbergh, shown bottom left as she entered the courtroom, testified as to her actions the night of the kidnaping, March 1, 1932; Betty Gow, center below, nursemaid to the slain baby, matched wits with a relentless defense counsel who tried to involve Miss Gow's former suitors in the crime; and Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, right, prepared to appear as voluntary witness and identify Hauptmann as the ransom receiver.

GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!

SALESMAN. (Below) "I'm a salesman—and a steady smoker," reports E. W. Davis. "I'll say this for Camel's costlier tobaccos—they taste better, and they never get on my nerves. And when I'm tired, I enjoy especially the way smoking a Camel revives my energy!"

AUTO RACER. (Below) Bill Cummings, brilliant winner of the Indianapolis 500-mile Speed Classic, says: "Any time I'm 'all in,' I know that Camels will give me a 'lift' in energy. I smoke them steadily, too, because I've found that Camels will never jangle the nerves."

SCIENTIST. (Above) Says R. F. Mann: "I picked Camels years ago. I like their flavor better the longer I smoke them. Camels don't upset my nerves."
