By UNITED PRESS

RALEIGH, N. C., FEB. 25—(UP)—The room is red-draped, carpeted in heavy plush, and the five chairs are black and high and soft where North Carolina's Old Men sit and balance the scales of justice.

Of course they have heard of President Roosevelt's plan to retire justices of the United States Supreme Court at the age of 70 and also, to increase the number of justices.

Under a constitutional amendment the State Supreme Court is to be increased from five to seven members. But there is nothing about retiring the state justices at the age of 70.

Whatever the five members who now occupy the big room in the Supreme Court Building here think about the president's proposed plan and that of the state in increasing the justices they are keeping quiet.

Apart because of jurisdiction, the United States Supreme Court and the North Carolina Supreme Court, however, have one thing in common under the new proposals—that of an increase in membership.

Fact is that the State Supreme Court will be increased. But there is doubt about whether Congress will agree with the president.

For years the State Supreme Court has carried on its work without bringing words down upon its head from the people.

There has been talk that some of the justices were getting pretty old, but no one doubted their integrity.

Their word, as far as the people of the state are concerned, has been satisfactory.

North Carolina justices are all on the shady side of 50, but only one is really old.

"Only in years am I old," says Justice Heriot Clarkson, 74. "In spirit I'm a young man."

He is a baldish little man who likes to stop you on the street and talk. He never forgets a face or a name.

He was born in Charlotte, a Democrat he says, and served in the 1899 General Assembly known as the "white supremacy legislature." Cameron Morrison as Governor appointed him to the bench in 1923. He ran for the office three years later, was elected for eight years and re-elected for a similar term in 1934.

So as the eyes of the country turn toward Washington and the President's proposal, North Carolinians speculate who will fill the two additional places on the State Supreme Court Bench.

To the fore has come the name of A. A. F. Seawell, the state's 73-year-old attorney general. Many believe Gov. Hoey will appoint Seawell, move Hubert Olive of Lexington, Hoey campaign manager, into the attorney generalship.

Another mentioned for the bench is J. Wallace Winborne of Marion, chairman of the State Democratic Committee. Too, some think Special Judge G. V. Cowper of Kinston will be appointed from the east, while the west mentions Judge Felix Alley of Waynesville along with Winborne.

How Cardui Helps Women To Build Up

Cardui stimulates the appetite and improves digestion, helping women to get more strength from the food they eat. As nourishment is improved, strength is built up, certain functional pains go away and women praise Cardui for helping them back to good health. . . . Mrs. C. E. Ratliff, of Hinton, W. Va., writes: "After the birth of my last baby, I did not seem to get my strength back. I took Cardui again and was soon sound and well. I have given it to my daughters and recommend it to other ladies." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.
