

Around the Town

with ZEB DENNY

A boy of about 8 came to the Rosemary pool. His swimming suit was a very shaky pair of old pants. Apparently ashamed of his garb, he quit going in. One day as he looked longingly through the wire at the other children having such a good time, a salesman standing by noticed him.

"Say, sonny," he said. "Why aren't you in?"

"I ain't got no suit."

"Can you swim?"

"No, sir. But I could learn if I had a suit."

"Is that so? Well, if you will learn, I'll buy you one."

Away the two went to Leggetts. When they came back the little fellow had on a pair of red bathing trunks. He strutted about for a few minutes, wanting everybody to see his new suit and hating to get it wet. Finally he jumped in and began kicking and splashing and making a great fuss.

Whether the salesman came back for a check up is not known; but in three days the boy was swimming across the pool.

A neighbor with the light of news breaking across his face said to me, "Well, Hughes is back."

"Back?" said I. "Where has he been?"

"Around the world. Haven't you read the papers?"

"No. I missed yesterday's."

—So that is how it is these days.

In the Greensboro Daily the Owls are referred to as "Tom Burnette's team". One sports writer picks them to win the tournament. May he have the vision of the prophets of old.

How long will it be until we find ourselves saying incredulously that we remember when people actually paid a dollar for a ten-minute ride in an airplane? Not many years ago I paid three for my first ten minutes in the air.
