Dear Sir:

I'm writing this hoping that it may prevent someone else from having the unpleasant experience that I had.

Sunday afternoon, I took my family, Mabel Williams, and Larene Parker out riding. After a trip out toward Rocky Mount, we came back and went to the Gravel Pit near Garysburg. The sand was so pretty we all took off our shoes and hose, and went down to play in the sand.

There is a small stream of water running through the sand, so we walked around bend after bend until we reached the end. Mabel Williams fell into what seemed to be a hole in the water, over her knees.

I was walking a little in the rear of the party, and was carrying my little boy in my arms. I had emerged from the water, and was walking in the soft sand, when suddenly I sank up to my waist in quick-sand.

I held my little boy over my head, and called for some one to take him. My wife soon approached near enough to take him while I told the rest of the party to go back to firm ground.

After my wife took the baby, I managed to pull myself out of the quick-sand some way (I came out somewhat like a lizard-and looking much worse).

Yes, my white pants were ruined. It may sound funny, and no doubt I looked funny standing straight up and only being about two feet tall; but it is really dangerous. So take my advice, and don't go near the end of the pit.

R. J. Grant.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Clark and daughters, Marshall Lee and Clare Rivers and Major Drummond left this week on a trip on the Skyline Drive and other parts of Virginia. Miss Ercelle Harris has returned to Richmond, Va. after spending several weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Harris.
