FINE NEW BUILDING ACCEPTED

The new High School building, fourth unit of the present High School group in Roanoke Rapids, was formally accepted by the City School Board this morning in the presence of PWA officials, inspectors, contractors and architect.

The fine building, which cost $38,000, was erected with county and PWA funds after a shortage in room space faced the High School all year. One floor is now completed but is built to care for two more stories at a later date. There are six classrooms, an office, a library and two toilets on the finished floor.

Present this morning were the members of the School Board, PWA official C. H. Rogers, his assistant, J. J. Quinn, PWA inspector C. C. Burritt, architect Eric Flannagan, contractors Fred Forest and Cumba and city building and electrical inspector Henry Pitts.

It was the opinion of all that this is the best school building in the city, more substantial and with good workmanship, a tribute to Mr. Forest and others in charge of the various phases of work.
