

NEXT WEEK AT ROANOKE RAPIDS THEATRES

"THE RETURN OF FRANK JAMES" IS RETURN PICTURE

"Melody Ranch" Thursday-Friday Film At Imperial

"The Return of Frank James" with Henry Fonda and Jackie Cooper will be returned here next Sunday for a one-day run at the Imperial Theatre. Those who saw the show and its forerunner, "Jesse James", can vouch for the splendid entertainment the "James" pictures have offered.

The film "Down Argentine Way", reviewed on the opposite page, will be shown at the Imperial on Monday and Tuesday.

"Glamour For Sale", a sensational story of one of the most vicious blackmailing rackets in America, will be presented to Wednesday audiences at the Imperial. Starring Roger Prior and Anita Louise, the film depicts the inside life of lonely men hungry for companionship . . . of beautiful women selling friendship for a fee.

Hailed as an exciting and timely story, the film exposes the crooked "Date Bureaus", which are flourishing in every large city in America. These bureaus, usually run by racketeers, serve as the "front" for blackmailers. Pretty, young girls, who act as paid escorts for lonely business men, get their companions-of-the-evening drunk and pave the way for their blackmailing bosses. The whole lurid story is revealed in the film.

Thursday and Friday will see Gene Autry, Cowboy singing star, and Ann Miller in the musical, "Melody Ranch", at the Imperial.

The Wildhack brothers have taken over the western metropolis, "Torpedo", and are going wild. But then Gene comes to town, and the action thereafter is thick and fast with the cowboy coming out on top in every situation.

Gene, playing a real life role of a movie and radio cowboy, visits "Torpedo" for a frontier days celebration, but, finding that it is being overrun by the lawless Wildhack boys—his enemies since school days—he determines to stick around and clean up the town.

Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante has an important comedy role as Gene's aide and sidekick, who helps him get into trouble and is equally efficient in helping him out of it.

Roy Rogers will be seen at the Imperial in next week's Saturday-only film, "The Ranger and the Lady". As the title indicates, Rogers is a Texas Ranger and gives the story its western touch by roping up a couple of villains and getting off a couple of songs in true cowboy style. He is supported by "Gabby" Hayes, Jacqueline Wells, Si Jenks, Harry Woods and Henry Brandon.

Rogers and Hayes are members of the Texas Rangers. Brandon imposes unjust taxes on traders in the absence of Sam Houston, president of the Republic of Texas. Rogers enforces the trade tax, although it is against his principles, in order to stay on as a Ranger so he can combat Brandon and his gang.

Jacqueline Wells and her wagon train fall in Rogers' toils, but she surprises him by making a deal with Brandon. Rogers later learns that Miss Wells' father was murdered by Brandon, and with their difficulties settled they finally bring Brandon and his men to justice after plenty of hectic action.
