JAIL BONDS APPROVED

GOVERNOR BROUGHTON AND FAMILY

FIRST FAMILY OF NORTH CAROLINA

Joseph Melville Broughton became the Governor of North Carolina today amid colorful ceremony attended by thousands from all over the state, at the state capital. The day began about 10:30 and lasted throughout the remainder of the day, being climaxed by the Inaugural Ball at the City Auditorium. The Broughtons left their home in Hayes Barton about 10:30 a.m. and proceeded to the Governor's mansion. From there they went to the Auditorium where Mr. Broughton and all the other new state officials were sworn in during a joint session of the legislature. Governor Hoey presented Mr. Broughton in a very brief speech, after which Chief Justice W. P. Stacy administered the oath to the new governor. Mr. Broughton then delivered his inaugural address, after which the special session was dissolved.

Pictured above is the Broughton family group with the new governor seated at left. This picture made at the Holt Drive residence shows the entire family . . . Seated beside Mrs. Broughton is Woodson, age twelve, who attends Hayes Barton School on Glenwood Avenue. The tall handsome young man standing in front of the fireplace is J. M., Jr., freshman of his father's alma mater. The other tall youth is Bobbie, a tenth grader at Needham Broughton High School. votes cast in the election, 636 approved the ordinance, while 113 were opposed to the ordinance.

In the North Ward there were 424 votes cast (one ballot was spoiled), with 336 voting "yes" and 88 voting "no". In the South Ward there were 325 voting, with 300 approving the ordinance and 25 opposing the ordinance.

Officials at the North Ward polls were Henry Fitts, registrar, S. C. Cook and J. O. Brown, judges. In the South Ward they were Monroe Cameron, registrar, Joseph E. Collins and J. A. Wood, judges.

The Board of Commissioners met with the Mayor Wednesday in a call meeting to accept the report of the election from the registrars and judges, authorizing at the same time a notification to be published showing same.

The Commissioners are expected to meet in about two weeks for the purpose of approving the final plans of the Architect Frank Benton of Wilson. Mr. Benton was in the city today in regard to the plans for the jail and told officials that it will be about two weeks before he can get the plans ready for approval. Although plans in regard to the construction of the jail are being pushed at all possible speed, Mayor Allsbrook said today that actual construction could not get underway before about the middle of February.

Meantime the bonds will have to be issued and other necessary steps taken by the Board to clear the way for the construction of the building.

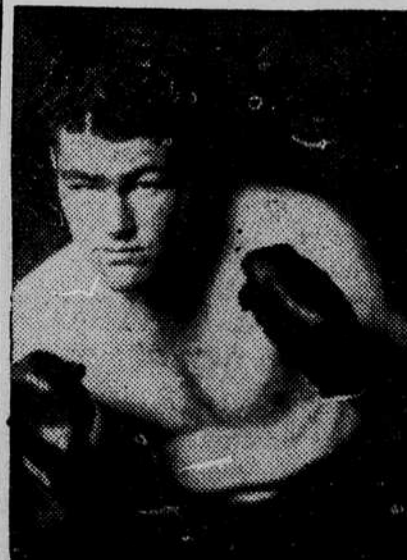

Mayor Allsbrook said today that the Commissioners had originally planned to meet next Tuesday night for the purpose of approving the jail plans, but that Mr. Benton had informed the Board that the plans would not be ready at that time. The Commissioners will hold their regular monthly meeting at that time, Mayor Allsbrook said. They will meet Tuesday night in the Municipal building at 7:30.
