

NEXT WEEK AT ROANOKE RAPIDS THEATRES

"BACK STREET" IS IMPERIAL THEATRE OFFERING SUNDAY

At the Imperial Theatre Sunday Margaret Sullivan and Charles Boyer will be seen in "Back Street", a "remake" of the picture starring other principals a few years ago. It's a love story in which Boyer, who rated right at the top among the Hollywood actors with the most sex appeal, struts his stuff. Margaret Sullivan is the lady in the case, and while the course of true love doesn't run quite smooth for them as it would have if conventions of the day had been observed, they manage to make themselves believe L'amour is worth any price one has to pay.

"The Great American Broadcast", which will be at the Imperial on Monday and Tuesday of next week, is reviewed on the opposite page. It stars Alice Faye, Jack Oakie and John Payne in a musical strong enough to give the cast opportunity to do some acting.

Wednesday the Imperial offers Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in "A Dangerous Game", which is composed largely of slapstick excitement. It's a satirical yarn poking fun at the eerie type of detective-murder mystery, and the director apparently concentrated on providing as much general noise and excitement as could be engendered from a sanitarium for the seemingly insane, a man obviously under the influence of drugs, another with a satchel containing an enormous sum in cash, a murder and a whole set of utterly ridiculous crooks—all after the money. Arlen emerges as an insurance detective and Devine as a masculine nurse in the sanitarium, as Arlen's assistant.

"The Big Store" will be at the Imperial on Thursday and Friday. The Marx Brothers romp through the film with their usual hilarious nonsense, and Tony Martin takes care of the romantic interest—and singing. "The Big Store" is a big surprise in store for local theatre-goers who like the entertainment screamingly funny, and full of "impossible" situations.

Ellen Drew and Charles Ruggles come to the Imperial on Saturday, June 28, in "Parson of Panamint". The picture is a whimsical yarn with Charles Ruggles in the leading role. It's entertainment for the whole family, and Ruggles is ably supported by Miss Drew. An added attraction will be "White Eagle".

The annual Home Security Life Insurance Company Convention is being held today through Sunday of this week at Myrtle Beach, S. C. Among those attending from here are V. C. Morgan, manager, and wife; Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Bone, L. A. Bone, and J. B. Thompson.
